76 Feared Dead In Attacks On Tankers

ENEMY SUBS SINK 1 SHIP, FIRE ANOTHER

Blazing 7,000 Ton Oil Craft Adrift In Atlantic After Heavy Explosion.

Lone Sailor Saved After Torpedoes Hit Second Vessel Off Florida.

(By International News Service)

The navy intensified its efforts to combat the menace to shipping along the Atlantic seaboard today as two more American oil tankers fell prey to enemy submarines, with the probable loss of 76 lives

Since January 14, when the Axis U-boats began their daring raids, 26 ships have been acknowledged by the navy to have been sunk or damaged Of these vessels 17 were tankers, laden with war-vital oil.

The heavy toll of tankers has increased the probability of gasoline and oil fuel rationing for the eastern states

Latest victims of the enemy submarine offensive were the 7,451-ton R. P. Resor and the 10,227-ton W D. Anderson.

The R. R. Resor was torpedoed early Friday 18 miles off Manasquan, N. J., less than two hours' sailing time from New York harbor. An easy target on the moonlight sea, the tanker was staggered by the explosion, which started a spectacular fire.

When last sighted, the R. P. Resor was drifting northward near the spot where the Morro Castle burned with a loss of 124 lives in September, 1934. Only two of the Resor's crew of 43 were known to have been rescued.

The W. D. Anderson was sunk off the Florida coast Sunday night with only one survivor of a crew of 36, the navy disclosed.

The lone survivor, Frank L. Terry, 23, of Lansford, Pa., told of escaping oil fire by swimming to sea for more than an hour.

"Several of us were talking on the aft deck when suddenly there was an explosion. I went

Bank Night Winner Gets $2,000; Rest Of City Relieved

Clarence E. Long was back at his job firing the boilers for the Ohio Fuel Gas company at its Pavonia station today with $2,000 more in his pocket than he had before the three Warner theaters paid off the "bank night" award last night.

Meanwhile the rest of the city, at least that part of it that regularly subscribes to "bank night" through registration or insurance, had settled down after the excitement of seeing the award drop from $2,000 to $200 for next week.

Long's reaction to learning, by telephone, that he had won the award was about the same as that of the rest of the registrants except it carried the high hopes of the winner.

"Can you beat that?" was the first thing he said to Grattan Johnston, manager of the Madison theater, who notified Long as soon as the latter's card was found in the Madison matinee registration

Just a minute earlier Mrs. Long had been called by a club friend, Mrs Chloa Harpster, 89 West Third street, who told her that

British Paratroops, Commandos Stage Swift Invasion Raid On Northern Coast of France

(By United Press)

LONDON—British parachutists and commando infantry landed on the coast of northern France and carried out a successful attack on a specific objective in the first full scale invasion raid on French occupied territory since Dunkirk 20 months ago, it was announced today.

In a combined navy, army and air force operation parachute troops of a specially trained air-borne division were dropped on the French coast during the night by bombing planes

They attacked an important German post, center for an important radio locator by which the Germans detected the approach of airplanes, and were re-embarked successfully by ships of the navy while the commando infantrymen held back German reinforcements and the warships' guns covered them.

First reports said the raid had been a big success.

A military commentator described the raid as "small but very spectacular" and as a complete success.

As Britons heard of this first British challenge to the German army in France since France's collapse, Sir Archibald Sinclair, air minister, said in a speech:

"We must take Germany by the throat and shake the strength out of her. We must start not in 1944, not in 1943, but in 1942."

It was understood in well informed quarters that the parachutists opened the invasion raid, landing at specified ground objectives, and that afterward the infantry landed on the coast and established a bridgehead through which the parachutists withdrew.

Hours after the announcement of the raid the Germans recognized it in an official Nazi news agency dispatch, broadcast by Berlin and recorded here by the United Press:

On the northern French coast a number of British parachutists landed last night. After they had surprised a weak coastal post they retreated back over the channel two hours later in face

LOCKE-CRAFTON CONTROVERSY IN STALEMATE

Conference Fails to Bring Solution to 'Resignation'; Director to Stay On.

Following a brief conference between the two men this morning, the Mayor W. J. Locke-Service Director C M Crafton controversy today seemed to have reached a stalemate.

Locke and Crafton talked briefly in the mayor's office this morning, but so far as could be learned, nothing was cleared up.

Locke would not discuss what transpired in the conference, but said he would make a formal appointemnt of Fred B. Wolff to the service-safety post later today. Locke announced he had selected Wolff for the post last Thursday, after notifying Crafton that he had "accepted" his "resignation."

Crafton said the mayor had told him "this thing has gone too far," mentioned that he had chosen Wolff for the job, and asked "what are we going to do about it?"

Crafton said he replied that he would "think it over," and left the mayor's office without giving him an answer.

He reiterated, however, that he expected to be on the job Monday, still maintaining that he had not resigned, despite the fact that Locke has said that he has, and that his tenure in office ends today.

Meanwhile, Wolff said he had

HUNTS 2 YOUTHS

Sheriff Searches For Boys Missing at Lexington.

Authorities today were searching for two Lexington youths, 15 and 16 years old, who were reported missing from their homes for three days

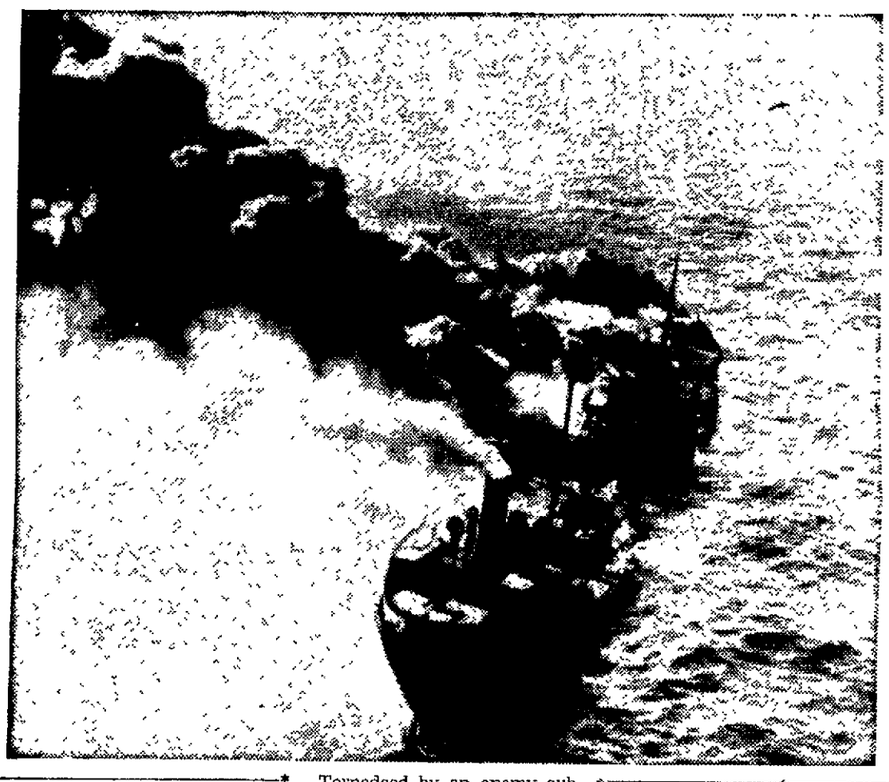
The boys, Robert Clinage, 15, and Charles Pickworth, 16, were last seen hitch-hiking to Mansfield, Deputy Sheriff G. C. Humphrey said.

The Clinage youth was described as five feet, eight inches tall and weighing 130 pounds. He was wearing a light brown leather jacket. His companion is about the same height and weighs 150 pounds.

Meanwhile, county authorities learned today that 15-year-old Billy Wiles, of 50 Crestline avenue, Mansfield, missing for more than a week, has been located in Cleveland.

He wrote a card to his mother, Mrs. Garland L. Wiles, telling her that he is working in Cleveland.

Torpedo Starts Blaze on U. S. Oil Tanker



Torpedoed by an enemy submarine five miles off the coast of New Jersey, the American oil tanker Resor, 7,451-tons, shown above, burst into flames. Only two members of the 43-man crew were rescued. Simultaneously with the announcement of the torpedoing, the navy revealed that only one survivor had escaped in the sinking of another tanker, the 10,227-ton tanker W. D. Anderson, Sunday night off the coast of Florida.

BASES REPORTED

Dies Committee Told of Axis Outposts Near U. S.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Reports that Japan and Germany are using air and supply bases close to the American continent reached the Dies committee today following it assertion that the west coast and Panama Canal "are still in the gravest peril" from Japanese attack.

Location of the secret enemy outposts was not disclosed but informed sources said they were strategically placed either for direct action against the Americas or for disrupting vital supply routes.

Committee members, after making public a report summarizing its evidence of Japanese espionage in California, Hawaii and the Canal Zone, called on government agencies to intensify their campaign against the Japanese.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON — (UP) —Rear Admiral Husband E. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Walter C. Short, who were the commanding officers at Pearl Harbor Dec. 7, were ordered today to stand trial by court martial.

They will be tried on charges of dereliction of duty as alleged by the report of the Roberts commission which investigated reasons for the success of the surprise Japanese attack on Hawaii which started the war.

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson and Secretary of Navy Frank Knox ordered the two former commanders to stand trial.

LION OR LAMB? GUESS WHICH

Wartime Weatherman Can't Help Much to Tell Just What March 1 Will Be.

With no advance notice of what tomorrow's weather will be, the traditional March lion probably was wondering today whether he can slip into the picture or must give way to the lamb, the emblem of a bright, sunny March 1.

The weatherman, handicapped by wartime censorship, could say only that there will be more snow flurries and continued cold weather this afternoon and early tonight. That's not much help to a March lion waiting to make his debut.

Today's weather was more to the lion's taste. An inch of snow that fell last night packed on highways, leaving them slippery, while the snow melted in the city and left a coating of black slush on the streets.

The mercury this morning dropped to a low of 18 degrees from a top of 29 yesterday. Despite overcast skies, the temperature moved up to 27 at noon today.

Only one thing was reasonably certain today—it will be cold when March, the first spring month, begins at 12:01 a. m. tomorrow. It was cold over most of the country today, but no extreme cold was in sight for the week-end.

Invasion Fleet Driven Off In 2-Day Conflict

Furious Fight Sweeps Enemy From Java Sea; Units Believed Re-Forming For New Assault on Island After Flight to North.

(By International News Service)

BATAVIA—Japan's first attempt to land invasion troops on Java has been defeated after a furious two-day naval battle in the Java sea, but the huge fleet of Japanese transports and their powerful naval escort were believed late today to be reorganizing for a new thrust.

There is little doubt that the invasion fleet soon will return, informed quarters said.

American and other United Nations sea and air forces scored a substantial victory, although no details of the roaring battle were given. It was declared that both sides had suffered losses.

Up to 8:30 p. m. (8 a. m. EWT) there had been no attempt to land Japanese troops anywhere on Java.

The naval battle ended as the powerful Japanese fleet fled to the north under the guns of United Nations ships.

It was indicated that high-level and dive-bombers had played an important part in the action.

A Netherlands Indies high command communique said a Japanese convoy strongly escorted by war vessels was retreating northward under the fire of the guns of a United Nations naval squadron.

Previously the Japanese convoy and warships had approached Java's northeast coast.

There were no reports of any actual Japanese landing attempts.

While the communique said both sides suffered losses in the battle at sea, there were no details regarding their extent.

The announcement, however, did state that five Japanese planes were shot down while carrying out raids against various points in western Java.

The N. E. I. war bulletin said: "On the afternoon of Feb. 27, a strong Japanese fleet which covered a convoy approaching from the north was attacked in the Java sea by an Allied squadron.

"In the course of the fighting, which continued after darkness had fallen, losses were sustained by both sides. Their extent is not known since complete records have not yet been received.

"For the same reason no review of the naval action can yet be given.

"Reports received indicate, however, that the convoy, which consisted of several 'tens of ships,' retreated to the north in the course of the battle."

TROOPS RULE IN SCORCHED CITY

British Troops Take Over Rangoon; Japs Feared to Have Crossed Sittang.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—British army forces have taken over control of Rangoon, scorched, Japanese-threatened capital of Burma, military authorities in London revealed today.

Authorities revealed this move had been made with indications the Japs had managed to cross the Sittang river to the north.

The situation in Burma again must be regarded as "very serious," authorities declared.

It was stated there was no reason to doubt a Mandalay report that the Japanese have cut the railroad and highway leading north to Pegu.

This was accepted as an indication that the Japanese "probably" have crossed the Sittang river line, the last natural defense barrier between the advancing Japanese and Rangoon.

The British army, according to authorities in London, took charge of Rangoon at the request of the governor of Burma.

First Daughter In 70 Years Arrives For Black Family

Mr. and Mrs. Roger A Black of the Marion avenue road today puzzled over a tough problem—that of naming the little girl born to Mrs. Black in General hospital yesterday.

The matter of naming either a son or daughter usually is discussed long in advance by most prospective parents, but with the Blacks they hadn't even thought of the possibility of a daughter. The reason is that for 70 years there have been no daughters born in the family of the late Frank B. Black, founder of the Ohio Brass company.

The last daughter born in the Black family was Mrs. William Weldon, sister of Frank B. Black. Since then the family has had only sons.

Frank B. Black himself had four sons, Roger, Robert, Donald, and John. Roger has had three sons, Robert two, and Donald two —all in an unbroken line without a daughter.

"We had even stopped considering the possibility of a daughter when any of us were expecting children," said Roger Black this morning, "But needless to say we are all highly elated."

The mother and baby are both doing well.

U. S.-French Relations Still Clouded Despite Vichy Pledge

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Important issues still clouded relations between the governments of France and the United States today despite written assurances that the French fleet would be kept out of Axis hands.

Until the pending questions are clarified, the American government considers its examination of the French situation as incomplete, and the position of the Vichy regime as not satisfactory to the United States.

Vichy's renewed assurances of an intention to maintain neutrality were given in written form in reply to a personal message sent by President Roosevelt to Marshal Henri Philippe Petain on Feb. 10.

The exchange of messages was revealed by Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles yesterday a short time before he received the French ambassador, Gaston Henry-Haye, to resume discussion of the problems threatening relations between the two governments.

The Welles statement disclosed that the United States is counting upon the French people to keep their leaders from guiding them into outright military and naval collaboration with Germany and Italy.

President Roosevelt informed Petain, in the Feb. 10 message, he was confident that French assistance to the Axis powers "would be contrary to the wishes of the people of France and disastrous to their aspirations and to their final destiny."

The war is making itself felt in the wardrobe as well as the garage and the pantry. But this time the news isn't bad—it's glamorous!

In the Sunday edition you'll find what guns abroad are doing to fashions at home; and pictures make an interesting story more interesting.

Richland county has one of the finest law libraries in north central Ohio and yet very few citizens have ever visited it. Camera and reporters will escort you through the library tomorrow.

Novelist Jim Tully once lived and worked in Mansfield. Even if you're not one who remembers him you'll find his story entertaining and his stay in the city one of the periods that differed from most of the rest of his life.

There's an unusual short story in the Sunday edition, too. It has a jungle background. A strange combination of conscience and gorillas makes it weird and gripping.

GEN. JOHNSON:

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — They say there is a shortage of scrap iron, steel and other metals right now.

Gen. Johnson.

One of the best steel men I know predicts we will make between four and five million fewer tons of steel in 1942 than in 1941, because of shortage of ore and scrap.

Of course he is talking about the visible supply only. There is no way of getting good figures on anything else. But, considering the tremendous mountains of steel we have produced over the years that seems a strange state of affairs.

Did you ever pass a typical American farm and not see an abandoned steel plow or rake or binder or some other implement pulled off into a corner of some field and left there to rust its shape away? Usually in addition there is a yard full of similar junk out behind the barn or wagon sheds. American farmers are unusually careless in this regard.

How about the miles of abandoned railroads which have become little more than twin streams of rust on half-forgotten rights-of-way—or dozens of other sources such as automobile junk yards, ornamental iron fences that are no longer ornamental, useless iron and steel on houses of the early General Grant period and so forth?

Of course, it is true that some of the most saleable of this has been culled over by junk men who have easy access to it and can drive good bargains. But you need only to glance around to know that tons of it still remain.

When I was a kid one of our principal sources of revenue was this kind of stuff and old buffalo bones obtained at great toil and sold at little profit—but enough of it would pay for a circus ticket. In today's much greater and more urgent problem, the first thing to do is to find out if there is enough of this stuff to consider, where it is and to organize to go and get it.

For that we already have an ideal set-up really longing for something to do to help win the war—the Boy Scouts. Like everything else that has been written in this piece, all this is largely conjecture, but the chances are good that, if this job were turned over to these boys under competent leadership, you could get a passable survey made in two weeks time and, if it showed favorably, begin collection immediately.

Scrap gathered in this way probably cost more than the market but we are reaching a point—if we have not passed it—where cost is only one consideration and not the greatest one at that. The Japs and the Germans found that out long ago. Jesse Jones doesn't seem to suspect it yet.

There is another point while we are on the subject of farm implements. Secretary Wickard seems to be worried about a shortage in farm labor. I hope he hasn't forgotten that, in this new day of power farming—tractors, wheat-land plows, header-combines, three row cultivators and the like—there is hardly a farm in this country that is not "over-engined for its beam"—which means that it has 100 to 500 per cent more equipment than is necessary to get out its normal production.

If that equipment and the lessening supply of man-power were pooled on the "Mount Gilead plan" discussed here a few days ago, there is almost no forseeable limit to which we could not go in increasing production, even on a constantly decreasing supply of man-power.

BROADWAY

—By Dorothy Kilgallen

Manhattan Nights.

(The Man with the Long Red Hair)

MANHATTAN is the place where people come to be found by fame. As a rule, anyway. But there are people who break the rules and one of them is a man who came to Broadway to be forgotten by fame. He came to the Big Town not to knock on Opportunity's door, but to get away from a city that was enchanted by him.

Kilgallen

He was the kind of attraction that happens in show business once in a very blue moon, perhaps not that often. His talents were just the average talents of the average musician. He wasn't handsome, certainly—he wore his red curly hair in long, musician fashion, and he had a broad grin and a few scattered freckles.

He was a super-spellbinder bewildered by the magic effect he had on the masses.

Paul Ash was his name. He was just a piano playing bandleader from Milwaukee, but when he hit Chicago in the Roaring Twenties he caused more commotion than the Chicago fire.

The man with the long red hair came to Chicago's Loop in the era of rolled stockings and shingle bobs and swagger sticks and speakeasies. He opened at the McVickers theater with a band on the stage. Within two weeks crowds stood four abreast around the entire block waiting from early until late to sit through a film they would never remember seeing, just to watch him wave a baton and grin. There was scarcely ever a man in the theater, or in the crowds that stood four abreast.

Before long Balaban and Katz built a million dollar theater especially for him and his followers. He was the "Rajah of Jazz" and so they named the theater the Oriental. One of the busiest thoroughfares in the Loop was rechristened Paul Ash Lane. Stenographers and housewives and telephone operators and shop girls pooled their quarters and dollars to buy him a pure platinum baton.

Women who had never met him personally divorced their husbands because they were so hypnotized by his charm. Once an irate spouse brandished a revolver and took a shot at Ash from the mezzanine. He missed.

School girls skipped classes to sit and watch him. They'd bring bags of sandwiches and containers filled with malted milk and they'd stay in the theater yawning through picture after picture just to see him from the first show in the morning until the last show at night.

From Chicago Ash came to New York. He packed both the Manhattan and the Brooklyn Paramounts and introduced another protege—Helen Kane—who became a star instantly.

But Ash didn't want to be a matinee idol or a star-maker. Funny, but true. He was just a fellow who wanted to lead a band. His wife and their daughter were his two big interests. The girls who swooned over him embarrassed him.

He was part of an era and while that era lived there was no escape for him. But the era died.

Now he's doing what he wants to do. He lives in Jackson Heights and commutes to work by subway. The theater he's playing at is jammed every day. But Paul Ash would tell you—and happily—that he isn't the one who's responsible for the crowds.

One of his proteges is, though. The flappers would remember her. She was the long-legged, skinny kid who looked like a John Held, jr., cartoon and wore evening dresses with rhinestone straps and sang slangy songs about love. And danced the Charleston furiously.

She's the one who's responsible for the crowded house that hears Paul Ash's music.

They come to see a picture called "Roxie Hart"—starring Ginger Rogers.

Dies Committee Publishes 'Yellow Paper' That Reveals Enemy Plan.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Following publication by his committee on un-American activities of a sensational "yellow paper" outlining Japanese espionage and war aims, Chairman Dies (D. Tex.), today called on the government to launch a three-point program "to halt this Japanese trojan horse in America."

At the same time, the Texan said the committee soon will make public a 500-page "black paper" on Nazi and Fascist espionage and sabotage, and also a supplement to the "yellow paper" giving evidence as to the location of Japanese oil and refueling bases in the Pacific area.

Specifically, Dies demanded that this government:

1. Remove "at once" all Japanese, aliens and natives, and all other "suspected individuals," from coastal and other strategic areas.

2. Drastically tighten present methods of investigation and supervision of these persons.

3. Remove all present and former members of or sympathizers with "any subversive organizations" from jobs in the government or in war industries.

In the 285-page "yellow paper" the committee said that as early as last August it had in its possession evidence that the Japanese planned to attack the United States, and that Pearl Harbor would be a major objective in that attack.

The report, replete with strategic maps and other documents seized by investigators from Japanese agents, declared that the committee wished to hold public hearings on the matter last fall, but was dissuaded by the state department, then negotiating for a peaceful settlement with Japan.

Perhaps the most amazing item in the report is partial translation of a book written "several years ago" by a Japanese militarist—Lieut. Gen. Kiyokatsu Sato—entitled "Japanese-United States War Imminent."

After asserting that such a war was inevitable, this Nippon general proceeded to outline the states of the war, each of which, he said, would take several years.

First is Japan's occupation of the Hawaiian islands. Then "the destruction of the United States fleet and the Panama Canal." Then the occupation of the west coast of the United States and "destruction of cities there."

Potato Farmers Told of Need For AAA Allotments.

Richland countians who plan to grow more than three acres of potatoes this year must apply to the county AAA headquarters by March 14 for their acreage allotments, Guy L. Taylor, county AAA chairman said today.

This ruling applied, however, only to growers who have produced less than three acres of potatoes annually during the past three years. Any farmer who grew more than three acres since 1939 is on record at the AAA office and will receive his quota.

There will be no government payments to farmers on the basis of the 1942 potato acreage, it was pointed out. This year's potato acreage will be used in the event marketing quotas are set up for potatoes and the federal program is continued.

FILES $400,000 DAMAGE ACTION

Mansfield Woman Claims She Was Detained by Conspiracy In 2 Sanitariums.

A $400,000 damage suit had been filed in common pleas court in Columbus today by Mrs. Mary H. Hautzenroeder, 109 West Second street, Mansfield, who charges that three doctors and a woman conspired to detain her in two sanitariums and the Columbus State hospital in 1934.

The suit, second of its kind filed by Mrs. Hautzenroeder in the past four years, is against Drs. Carl W. Sawyer of Marion, Robert C. Tarbell and George T. Harding III of Columbus, and Mrs. Mabel Tarbell of Worthington.

Mrs. Hautzenroeder contends that she was detained unlawfully in the institutions and an insanity finding of the Franklin county probate court was expunged from the records in 1935.

A $400,000 suit involving the same charges was dismissed last March 3 in Columbus after the court upheld a demurrer filed by the defendants. The first action was started in 1938 with Attorney Frank Culp of Mansfield as co-counsel. Columbus attorneys filed the new action.

It was understood that Mrs. Hautzenroeder was in a Marion sanitarium for a short time and then went to the Tarbell sanitarium at Worthington where she remained for three months. Later, she was transferred to the Columbus State hospital and was there 12 days before a probate court order released her.

SENATE COMMITTEE CONSIDERS LATEST FDR-FARM BLOC CLASH

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — The senate agriculture committee was called into extraordinary session today to consider whether the latest "farm bloc" clash with President Roosevelt over agricultural prices will be abandoned.

Despite Mr. Roosevelt's severe criticism, it appeared probable that a move to attach to the $32,000,000,000 war appropriation bill amendments prohibiting sale of government-held farm products at less than parity prices, will be continued.

In an effort to work out an agreement with "farm bloc" leaders Sen. Barkley, Ky., Democratic leader, also arranged for a conference which will include Undersecretary of War Patterson and other government officials.

The $32,000,000,000 bill has been held up because Sen. Thomas (D) Okla., proposed to offer an amendment prohibiting use of the money to buy government-held products at less than parity, and an amendment by Sen. Bankhead (D) Ala., requiring that purchases be made in the open market.

Mr. Roosevelt's criticism of what he termed reprehensible practices of attaching "riders" to appropriation bills was met by farm bloc leaders with the assertion that they were following a usual legislative practice.

"I will do all I can to see that these people having control of surpluses will not sell them below the price fixed by law," said Sen. Thomas. "If this raises the price to consumers $1,000,000,000, then if it isn't done, it means that farmers will get $1,000,000,000 less than the lowest price level for agriculture products fixed by congress in the price control law."

Don't attempt to turn off the main gas valve in your house or even the pilot light in the gas range in the event of an air raid alarm, the Ohio Fuel Gas company warned today. The simple operation of turning out the burners that are lit is all that's needed unless the house is badly damaged by a bomb. If that happens, the main valve should be shut off and not turned on again until a service man is called. These are the first instructions to be issued by the Gas company which is working out further directions with the county defense council.

BITTINGER ASKS ASSEMBLY CALL

Would Give Cities Funds to Hire Additional Police.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—J. Freer Bittinger, state Democratic chairman, today urged Gov. John W. Bricker to recall the Ohio legislature to provide funds for municipal civilian defense programs.

"There is general need over the state for more policemen, more firemen and more equipment," Bittinger said, adding that few cities could pay the cost, while the state, its treasury "bulging" with funds, "can well afford to come to the rescue."

The Democratic chairman said Cleveland needed 400 additional officers to guard war industries but had no money to pay them.

HOUSE BEATS SUSPENSION OF 40-HOUR WEEK

Senators Reported In Accord On Plan to Suppress Strike-Halt Bills.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—Two major developments today appeared to boom likelihood of congress enacting strong anti-strike or other labor legislation in the near future.

The overwhelming defeat in the house of the proposal to suspend the 40-hour week law was a major setback for those seeking to modify labor laws.

The second development was an apparent agreement among a majority of members of the senate labor committee to suppress anti-strike legislation in order to give the war labor board a further opportunity to work out its no-strike program.

Even administration leaders were surprised by the house vote of 226 to 62 against the proposal of Rep. Smith (D) Va., to suspend the 40-hour week and all other federal laws dealing with working hours for the duration of the war.

Subject of bitter debate for two days, the movement collapsed when the great majority of Republicans, who had remained silent during debate, swung against the bill.

While some members of the senate labor committee voiced doubt that the war labor board can frame a national policy on the open and closed shop issue and wages, there was general agreement that the board would be given a further chance to demonstrate its effectiveness.

Sen. Taft (R) Ohio, member of the committee, joined Sen. Thomas (D) Utah, chairman, in opposing legislation, temporarily at least.

"Of course the board will have to either work out an agreement between labor and capital on a definite national policy or there will be demands for legislation," said Sen. Taft.

"I don't think there will be any legislation until the board is given a chance. I am inclined to go along with the board but if it cannot work out a policy congress will have to act."

Sen. Thomas maintained that strikes have been reduced to a low level, and that the labor board has had remarkable success.

Meanwhile, in an unusual Saturday session, the house convened to complete action of the senate-approved second war powers bill, containing 16 different grants of authority and amendments of existing laws.

Lad Illustrates Pearl Harbor--Kills Brother

CANTON — (CP) — Eugene Humphrey, 13, was showing his brother, Carl, 8, how the U. S. forces stood off the Japanese at Pearl Harbor.

Eugene held a gun that he had found in his parents' bedroom. Carl sat on a bed. Suddenly, there was a bang and Carl grasped his chest. The younger boy walked into another room and collapsed. He died within a few minutes.

"I didn't mean to do it, honest," Eugene sobbed to officers later. "It went off before I knew it."

Eugene said he thought at first that Carl was playing that he had been shot. The parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Humphrey, of near Louisville, O., were away from home when the shooting occurred last night. Joan, 10, and Patricia, 12, sisters of the boys, witnessed the shooting.

CONTROVERSY IN STALEMATE

Conference Fails to Solve 'Resignation'; Crafton to Be on Job Monday.

not been notified of any vacancy in the service-safety office.

"I'm still waiting for the vacancy, and I presumed I'd hear of it when it came about."

Wolff had previously stated that he would accept the appointment, but not until the post was open.

Asked if Crafton's statement that he intended to be on the job as usual Monday meant to him that there was not a vacancy, Wolff replied.

"I presume that's the way it would have to be interpreted."

Locke's stand was that he would go ahead with the appointment of Wolff without giving Crafton a formal letter of discharge, which the latter told the mayor Thursday he would have to do before he (Crafton) considered himself out as director.

Locke said he expected Wolff to make arrangement for his bond and be on the job Monday.

Today's meeting between Crafton and Locke lasted only a few minutes. Crafton then left for a Red Cross meeting, returning later to the City building to sign payroll vouchers.

Difficulties between Locke and Crafton began two weeks ago today, when Locke declared that Crafton had resigned verbally earlier in the week. He said no date for the resignation to become effective had been set, but later set the Feb. 28 date himself. Crafton has maintained that he did not resign verbally, and after Locke notified him last Wednesday night that he was "accepting" his "resignation," wrote to the mayor saying he was forced to ignore the mayor's note, and demanding formal notice of discharge before giving up his office.

Bank Night Winner Gets $2,000; Rest Of City Relieved

Long's name had been drawn. She had no more than hung up the receiver when Johnston's call was received.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Long had attended the Madison matinee and were spending a quiet evening at their home on Sunset boulevard when the news reached them.

Some of the "bank night" award will go into this same new home which the Longs purchased two years ago, Mrs. Long said today, speaking in the absence of her husband.

"We've talked a lot about what we will do with the money," she added, "and I know it will be used to help pay for our home, clear up some obligations and buy defense bonds."

The Longs have lived in Mansfield seven years since coming here from Pavonia where they were residents for eight years. Long is a stationary engineer for the Ohio Fuel Gas.

The award won by Long was only the second paid by the Warner theaters since last fall, when Fred Seith won $1,300 from the theater and also $3,900 on three insurance policies.

Since then, Mrs. Charlotte Robison, 189 Coul avenue, won $5,600, but all of that amount came from insurance policies. That was in January, but she did not win the theater award.

SCIENTIST TEXT FOR SUNDAY SET

"CHRIST JESUS" is the subject of the lesson-sermon which will be read in the Church of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. It will have for the Golden Text: "God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:19).

Included in the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon are the followmg correlative passages from the Bible and from the Christian Science textbook, 'Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy. "He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God" (Matthew 16: 15,16). "Christ expresses God's spiritual, eternal nature. The name is synonymous with Messiah, and alludes to the spirituality which is taught, illustrated and demonstrated in the life of which Christ Jesus was the embodiment."

SETS UP TIRE ALLOCATIONS

Rationing Board Allots 32 Passenger, 108 Truck Tires To Mansfielders.

125 tubes for trucks and buses. The county's quota for March—expanded over previous monthly allocations as the result of efforts by Bailey, calls for 66 passenger car tires, 55 tubes, 176 truck and bus tires, and 194 truck and bus tubes.

Distribution of the county quota to the eight tire rationing boards, listed in order of passenger car tires, passenger car tubes, truck and bus tires, and truck and bus tubes, is as follows:

Lexington—2, 2, 6, and 6; Butler—1, 1, 4, and 4; Shiloh—4, 4, 7, and 8; Plymouth—2, 2, 6, and 6, Bellville—3, 2, 9, and 10; Lucas—2, 2, 6, and 6 Shelby;—10, 9, 24, and 29; Mansfield—32, 32, 108, and 125; emergency reserve—10, 1, 6, and 0.

REPORT URGES MORE FIREMEN, 5 NEW TRUCKS

Underwriters Say Mansfield Should Retire All Firemen 62 Years Old.

all department rules in a handbook to be given to firemen and maintained.

The underwriters recommend that sufficient men be added immediately so that there will be at least four men on duty with each company at all times, including vacation periods.

"Eventually," the report said, "sufficient men should be added so that the least number on duty will be six during the day and eight at night in Companies 1 and 2 and Ladder Company 1, four men at day and six at night in other companies and five men at day and seven at night in a new ladder company to be set up at Station No. 4.

At present there are 34 men in the department, including the fire chief and the city electrician. Eighteen of the men are stationed at the Central Station in the municipal building while fourteen others work at the other three stations in the city.

As the firemen work a day and rest a day, this means that there are nine men working at the Central station each day and two at each of the three stations. Two men serve as auxiliary workers at the three outlying stations.

In the line of new apparatus, the underwriters suggest that new pumpers be purchased for Stations 2, 3 and 4, a ladder truck for Station 4 and a new pumper for a station in the west end of the city.

The half-mill fire levy, passed last fall, covers the greater part of the program for the purchase of apparatus. Three new pumpers will be purchased as well as a new ladder truck for Station No. 1 and another pumper for a new station which will be built in the western part of the city.

The levy, however, makes no mention of the addition of several men to the department, nor the establishment of a new ladder station at No. 4. Nor does it provide for a drilling tower or any other projects suggested by the underwriters.

Firemen were unable to estimate just how many would be needed if the underwriters' suggestions were carried out. One reason why they could not make an estimate was the staggered schedule of having more men on night duty than on day duty.

"It sounds as though it would call for a doubling of the force," said one of the firemen.

DON'T TELL ELEPHANTS--BUT PEANUTS ARE GETTING WAR JOB

(By Wide World)

NEW ORLEANS—Don't let the elephants know—but peanuts are being groomed for a war job, to help make tinplate.

Peanuts, along with cottonseed, are a prospective source for a substitute for palm oil, used to blanket molten tin to keep the air away while plate is made. Palm oil, imported to the extent of $30,000,000 worth annually from the East Indies, now is difficult to obtain.

A substitute for this oil is one of the first jobs of the department of agriculture's new southern regional research laboratory. The huge building on the shores of Lake Ponchartrain in New Orleans is one of four—the others east, north and west—set up by congress to find new uses for America's crop surpluses.

The object is not to use either peanut or cottonseed oil directly, but to impart to them by physical and chemical treatment the properties found naturally in palm oil when subjected to the drastic conditions existing in the molten tin bath.

Several such products have been produced by adding hydrogen to cottonseed and peanut oils in such a way that they can withstand temperatures of 450 degrees Fahrenheit for long periods of time in the presence of molten tin and hot steel plate.

Products made thus far have a longer life than does imported palm oil and in laboratory tests they have given shiny bright tinned surfaces.

The new oils are solid at room temperatures and look like lard. The cottonseed and peanut oil products vary from white to cream color. Palm oil, at similar temperatures, also is likely to be solid.

Another war job here is increasing the durability of sandbags. Mildew and molds attack the fabrics. Both burlap and cotton bags are under test.

Extensive studies in England have indicated that untreated sandbags will last 20 to 80 days, depending on the season of the year and atmospheric conditions. Treatments with certain copper compounds are expected to increase the life of the bags up to at least two years. The copper prevents the action of the soil bacteria.

Jap Bombers Did This to Burmese Capital

The ruins above were left in Rangoon, capital of Burma, after Japanese bombing planes had raided the city, which now is threatened with capture. The wreckage left by the enemy planes now has been added to by the British, who have burned all supplies and materials that might be of value to the Japanese if and when they enter the city.

NEWSPAPERARCHIVE®

Mansfield News-Journal

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, SATURDAY, FEBRUARY 28, 1942.

Drive carefully tomorrow—and no further than to church and back home unless necessary.

For such a short month, February has certainly delivered its full share of important world happenings.

As nearly as can be gathered, nearly all congressmen were against pensioning themselves in the first place—except that they didn't want to oppose the majority.

Thinking Further Than 'Defense'

DEFENSIVE WARFARE, at the best, can be only temporary—just long enough to get ready for the offensive action necessary to carry war to the enemy.

Attackers have the advantage of following a planned course, and introducing an element of surprise, with presumably full knowledge of conditions to be met, as was the case at Pearl Harbor and other Pacific strongholds which have been successfully assailed.

Until quite recently public thinking in the United States has been largely directed toward the weak word, "defense," and this is even yet applied to stamps and bonds being sold to pay the costs of war.

The softer sound of "defense," instead of "war," may have been necessary appeasement of loud-spoken isolationists and unshakable pacifists during the pre-war preparations, but since December 7 defense has been no more than one phase of actual warfare, which, to be successful, must become aggressive instead of merely awaiting enemy attacks.

President Roosevelt has emphasized this point and a few examples of its potentialities have already been given, as in the instances of the air raid of Marshall and Gilbert islands, the successful forey in Macassar Straits, the present offensives in the Java area and MacArthur's surprise counter-blitz on the Batan front.

Value of offensive action is also being demonstrated in Russia and China is no longer satisfied with mere defense against Japanese aggression.

Whether it is Java that is held as a Far Eastern operating base, which now seems unlikely, or Australia that finally becomes the center of United Nations offense and defense in that Pacific area, the fact remains that victory will eventually be accomplished by strength of attack on Japanese territory, bases and supply lines.

It is too soon to begin calling them Victory stamps and bonds, but it is high time to begin thinking of them as War stamps and bonds.

Dispose of Surplus Sugar

WHILE it has been suggested quite frequently during the past few weeks that sugar should not be purchased in excess of reasonable needs, it appears that some perfectly well-intentioned persons thought it a good idea to buy while they could—even to the extent of several hundred pounds, or more, in a few instances, according to neighbors in whom they have confided.

Except for their lack of understanding, these purchasers of large amounts of sugar should not yet be subjected to severe criticism. Opportunity is now being given them to dispose of their surplus, either by returning it to stores or selling it to unsupplied neighbors—and it is only if they neglect or refuse to do this that they show disinclination to co-operate in the fair distribution system being set up by the federal government as a war emergency measure.

If, however, when the time comes for rationing sugar, they fail to make a truthful report of the amount of sugar they have on hand, they will become liable to federal prosecution and a heavy penalty.

Those who now have a surplus of sugar on hand should purchase no more until their supply is down to two pounds per person in the family, which is considered a reasonable reserve.

Consider Cancelling State Fair

THERE'S some talk about calling off the Ohio state fair this year, because of war conditions, but no decision has yet been reached.

Only the war emergency, which requires many sacrifices, could justify abandonment of the state fair for a year, or possibly longer.

There's a possibility that fairground space will be needed for storage of war materials and quartering of troops, and there is also the consideration of conserving tires on cars of thousands of motorists accustomed to driving to Columbus from all parts of the state.

State and county fairs have a legitimate place in the educational and entertainment fields, under normal conditions, but, like many other things, they must now be considered secondary to the national war effort and this should be borne in mind in deciding whether or not to hold fairs this year.

Poles Point To Prophecy

NOSTRADAMUS is not the only prophet to be dragged out of obscurity. In 1940 the Polish press bureau in London published a prophecy said to have come out of a spiritualistic seance in 1893. In it occurs this passage: "When the suffering of the people shall have lasted thirty years, there will arise a great heart who shall perform the miracle."

By the Poles' reckoning from other parts of the prophecy, the thirty years will expire in 1943. Then, by their interpretation, Poland will regain its independence. But surely there are other miracles to which the text might apply equally well.

One other passage is much clearer: "When the black eagle reaches the crossroads and turns its eyes toward the East to spread its Teutonic habits, it shall return with a broken wing." That sounds very much like a statement that Germany will fail in a Russian campaign.

The trouble with interpreting most prophecies, however, is that people put into them too much wishful thinking.

Because of an accident, described as "painful but not serious," Elsie Robinson has been unable to supply her "Listen World" column for the past several weeks. Some of the readers who have made inquiry about the omission of this popular feature may wish to write to Miss Robinson to tell her some of the things they have been thinking about in recent weeks. She'll appreciate letters addressed to her in care of King Features Syndicate, 235 East 45th street, New York City.

Those "glaring loopholes" that are said to be in tax laws must be observable only from the higher brackets.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The capital in wartime:

Uncle Sam's nieces are in a stew. Rep. Earl Wilson (R.-Ind.) has gone all out for a 11 p. m. curfew for girls in the government service.

The congressman argues that if the girls tucked themselves in an hour before midnight, they could be up for a good hearty breakfast the next a. m., would have their make-up in place, would be at work on time, and do their full eight-hours without once murmuring: "Jeeminee, am I dead!"

In the interests of national defense, Representative Wilson says, every effort must be made to see that the girls working for the government are at the peak of efficiency.

THE idea of an 11 p. m. curfew checked and double-checked by the landlord or landlady, who will report directly to the employing agency, has the girls screaming.

They say: "I'm always in before 11 on week nights but if it's lights out at that time, how am I going to get my hair washed; how am I going to get letters written to the family; how am I ever going to manicure my nails; how am I going to get in mending, bathing, facials, reading, my table tennis, music lessons, Spanish, etc.?"

So far as I'm concerned, the answer to all that is: "I don't know." If Congressman Wilson does, he may get some votes for his curfew law. If he gets enough, we would like to nominate him for the most unpopular man in Washington—the ballot by Uncle Sam's nieces.

THINGS happen funny in government. For instance, just when Washington was beginning to fret again about another rat epidemic, out pops a WPA item from Cleveland, O., telling all and sundry what a magnificent job the WPA boys had done on Cleveland rats.

Federal health officials estimate that a rat does $2 worth of damage to a community a year. In Cleveland, the WPA boys set out 350,000 poison baits—cost about $9,000. Result, according to Cleveland health officials, 100,000 dead rats. Net profit, $191,000.

Some experts are willing to testify that Washington is the worst rat-infested city in the United States, but so far congress has shown no inclination to save money for the District of Columbia by killing them off. Rat killing campaigns here now are carried on by the Boy Scouts, churches, and civic organizations.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Yellowstone National park, the oldest and best known of the national parks, was set aside by congress on Feb. 28, 1871. Within its limits are to be found more and greater geysers than in all the rest of the world put together. The area is principally in the extreme northwest portion of Wyoming but also partly in Idaho and Montana.

Timely Editorial

The British Are Brave.

The British complain so much about failure of their admirals and generals—the right of criticism still being freer in England than any country in the world—some Americans are getting the cock-eyed notion that the Briton is not much of a fighting man.

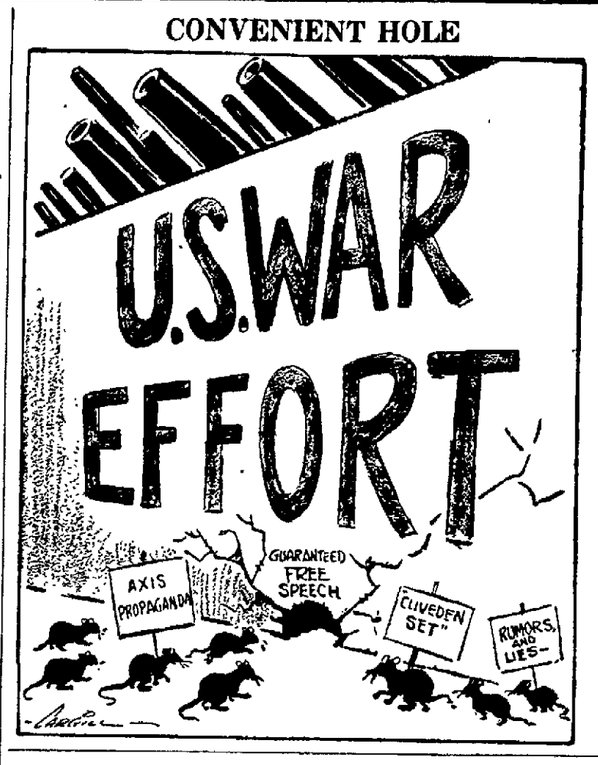
It is rather late to remind anyone that the people of those small British Isles did not push their flag around the world by being softies, that the battle record of a century and a half is largely a history of British heroism, that a handful of British soldiers has held sway over millions not only in one but in scores of lonely outposts.

The British are brave even when unarmed, as they proved by standing up under the most terrible of all bombings in London, Coventry and elsewhere.

Tobruks are not held by the faint-hearted — anymore than Batans.

Even their worst enemies always have credited the British with supreme courage—Cleveland Press.

CONVENIENT HOLE



How U. S. Chauffeurs Waste Fuel

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON—Judging by a number of letters containing arguments, criticism, condescending explanations, and downright abuse which this writer has received about a dispatch in which he commented on Mrs. Roosevelt's dancers, the dispatch which stirred all this up was decidedly too subtle.

Most striking of all the letters was a scribbled and unsigned note in an envelope postmarked Harrisburg, enclosing a cartoon by Brown. This cartoon showed a government auto tank truck, emitting streams through big holes marked "waste," "inefficiency" etc. while the government chauffeur abused a little figure marked "Taxpayer" because his tiny bucket was emitting a slight trickle through a hole in the bottom.

The scribbled comment was

JUST to keep the record straight this writer wants to say that he never approved of the expenditure of government money for dancers, pep talkers, press agents or, for that matter, anything else which might come under the head that there was no way of making a molehill of this mountain!

of morale building. The idea that the people of this country NEED morale building is fairly new in our history. Lincoln and Grant didn't use dancers. And it is silly to say that if they had it would not have been necessary to rush troops from Gettysburg to New York to quell draft riots.

No amount of street dancing, or pep talks, or press agent blurbs would have prevented that. New York City, it happened, was a hotbed of Southern sympathisers. Does anyone think any of the morale building on which we have been spending so much money has converted or will convert anybody who WANTS this country to lose the war?

The chief target in the much criticized article was an expression of wonder that such comparatively small wasteful expenditures would produce such a torrent of abuse from the country, while such extraordinarily large ones, much more obvious it would seem, had brought no reaction at all.

BUT this is a human characteristic. Recently the writer experienced it personally. He discovered himself furious, on recent cold days, to see a big White House automobile outside the recently confiscated du Pont apartments, waiting for someone, with the engine running rapidly in order to keep the heater going.

Of course the personage inside may not have known the gasoline was being used so extravagantly to keep the chauffeur warm, any more than the secretary of agriculture knew that his automobile engine was running just as rapidly to keep HIS chauffeur warm while the car waited, by the hour, outside his wife's apartment house.

But it so happened that, with tankers being blown up off the coast, the oil companies were spending their money to tell folks how they would have to be careful of oil for heating. And it did seem that running an automobile engine was a rather uneconomical way of keeping one person warm especially in a very large car.

In fact, it would seem as though the White House and the cabinet would see to it that such a bad example was not set in wasting fuel, even if the fuel was bought by the government!

So here the writer, because a few gallons of gasoline were being used in a way he did not approve, is just like the folks he was chiding a couple of weeks back.

Mr. Harrisburg, you are right!

Man About Manhattan

Thinks In English

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—This, to Paul Henreid, is the greatest town in the world. And Broadway is more than a street of eternal daylight, but a token of democracy, burning brightly while the capitals of the old world—Vienna, Paris, Berlin—are blacked out.

Paul Henreid is an actor. But his enthusiasm for democracy isn't an act. And when he returned to Broadway, which gave him his start in this country, the welcome he received wasn't an act either. Broadway can be genuine when it is dealing with genuine people.

An international if ever there was one, the tall young man with classic profile and dark blonde hair escapes being sticky by a comfortable margin. He is a good listener as well as being a good talker, has a ready laugh, and the gift for making a brief acquaintance seem like an old friendship.

BROADWAY got acquainted with Paul Henreid not long after his arrival in New York in August, 1940. He was cast as a bombastic German consul in "Flight To The West," a stage success. While the play was running, an English-made film, "Night Train," in which Henreid was a Gestapo agent, began making the rounds in this country and added to his reputation as an actor. RKO signed him to a long-term contract, the first fruit of which is "Joan of Paris," and it looks like RKO made a ten-strike.

But while Henreid got his start as a man you love to hate, there'll be no more Nazis or Gestapo agents in his career if he can help it. His hatred for Nazis equals only his religion of democracy, and it pains him to be officially classed as an "enemy alien" and under such restrictions as to the amount of currency he can carry, even while looking forward to complete citizenship. For Henreid went after his first papers only four days after he landed in New York, even before he had a job.

HENREID was born at Trieste, son of Baron Carl von Henreid. He was raised as an aristocrat, which only served, he says to make him democratic. In his book, Austria is an invaded and Nazi-dominated country. In 1935 UFA invited him to Berlin to make a film, and when he saw what the Nazis were doing to German people, he says, he decided there was nothing to do but get out. He was in England five years, on the stage and in films, before coming to the United States.

The speech processes Henreid (pronounced just plain Hen-reed) has gone through are interesting. After he left Austria he began to "think in English" and acquired what we call English accent. When he came to New York he was in speech and dress an Englishman. But before he acquired the American version of English, his tongue—which also could turn out fluid French—played him a trick and flavored his English with Austrian accent. Our 'yeah" isn't far removed from "ja," you know. But now that he has his tongue straightened out, he finds that the French has left him completely!

Decoration Or Defense?

Editor News-Journal:

If the scrap metal shortage is as serious as we have been led to believe, would it not be good patriotism to take the four prehistoric monsters that adorn (I use the word lightly) Central park and let them do their bit to scrap the Jap?

If these big guns were made to defend their country, what better time to do it than now?

If they were captured from the Confederates, then, after all these years spent holding down the corners of our park, surely their erstwhile owners would ask no better fate for them.

Their present ordnance value being slightly subzero and their decorative worth (in my humble opinion) considerably less, common sense would seem to demand that we in Mansfield lead the way in opening up this vast reserve of scrap metal to the present pressing needs of our country. Hundreds of towns all over the land will follow our example.

And for those sanguinary souls who just couldn't enjoy a peaceful summer afternoon in our lovely little park without being able to gaze upon such monsters of destruction and death, let me suggest that it probably won't be long now before these antiquated loud speakers can be replaced with similar toys of somewhat more modern design, made of American materials, surely, but—"Made in Japan."

How It Started

—By JEAN NEWTON

"Fool's Gold."

Like a fool's paradise, "fool's gold" is something that looks like what it isn't and taking it seriously entails consequences ranging from ludicrous to disastrous.

Now figurative for a wild-goose quest for quick riches, "fool's gold" originally was an allusion to minerals known as iron and copper pyrites, which glisten but are not gold.

Resembling the real thing in appearance, this dirt frequently would be mistaken by inexperienced prospectors, whose hopes would rise high, only to drop to the dumps when they found out that instead of digging into gold ore, they had been hard a-shoveling the ordinary garden variety of just bright yellow-hued earth.

Captain John Smith's early settlers in Virginia despatched a whole shipload of this to London, thinking it was the stuff of which fortunes are made, only to learn later that it was fool's gold. The exercise had done them good.

Self-Government for India May Be Outgrowth of Chiang's Visit

—By ASSOCIATED PRESS

THERE was more fanfare and hoopla when der fuehrer and il duce used to pay each other visits. But for historical significance a quiet visit to India's Congress party leader, Jawaharlal Nehru, by China's Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek last week far outclassed them.

The combined population of India and China is 10 times that of Japan. As the Japanese were reaching within 500 bomber miles of India, Chiang sought to persuade Nehru and other Indians to go all out to turn back the Nipponese. Apparently he spoke with Britain's approval. In turn, he was asking Britain to give his fellow-Asiatics more freedom.

Soon after Chiang had arrived in India, Indians were invited to representation in the British war cabinet and on the United Nations' Pacific War Council.

As Chiang left, Nehru predicted the visit would make history. Chiang bluntly declared that he "hopes and believes Britain, without waiting for any demand on the part of the Indian people, will as speedily as possible give them real political power. The vast majority of the world's opinion is in full sympathy with India's aspiration for freedom."

Changes Imminent.

In London, British officials hinted that Prime Minister Churchill planned to enlarge India's powers of self-government and send a cabinet representative to India "to put the India problem on a more satisfactory footing."

It was indicated that Nehru might be placed at the head of an Indian national administration.

One source said Laborite Sir Stafford Cripps had insisted something be done about India before accepting a seat in Churchill's war cabinet.

DeWitt Mackenzie, news analyst termed Britain's decision to grant India additional powers of self-government "one of the great developments of our time."

Then on Tuesday Lord Cranborne, Britain's colonial secretary, said England was "in favor of India's political freedom" but indicated it was the responsibility of Indian leaders to "devise some scheme which would be satisfactory to all."

At Home

Taxpayers Appeased?

So anxious were congressmen to end the abuse being heaped upon them by angry taxpayers for voting themselves pensions that they resorted to an awkward device to take the legislation off the statute books quickly.

The vote in the house had to be on instructing house members of a joint senate-House conference committee to insist on retention of a repealer attached by the senate as a rider to a minor naval bill The house vote was 389 to 7.

But still congressmen weren't sure they had squared themselves. One representative, facing an election campaign, lamented: "We are on a spot. Regardless of the repeal vote the fact remains that no one opposed the pensions when they came up originally."

Behind Labor Quarrels.

When labor thumps for "union security" it has one of these in mind:

A closed shop—all employes of a company must belong to a union and be hired from union rolls.

A union ship—non-union workers may be employed, but must join the union after a specified period.

Maintenance of membership—while employes are not required to belong to a union, those who are members of unions must remain so or lose their jobs.

After Pearl Harbor, labor and management agreed that there should be no strikes or lock-outs for the duration.

But labor and management were able to reach that agreement only by evading the touchy issue of "union security." Now the U. S. Conciliation Service has been swamped with disputes. Virtually all involve labor's demand for "union security."

In San Pedro, Calif., meanwhile, the day shift, 3,500 members of the CIO Shipyard Workers' union, walked off the job of building $81,000,000 worth of destroyers for the Navy, after putting in an eight-hour day. The Bethlehem Steel Co., had demanded that they work 10-hour shifts. In his speech Monday the president pointedly called for "uninterrupted production."

After the War . . .

A good many economists believe that a major cause of the rise of militant nationalisms between world wars was the erection of high trade barriers by the various countries, including the United States. Secretary Hull tried to rectify the situation with his reciprocal trade policy.

On Tuesday Britain and the U. S. announced that while it was still too early to decide in detail how Britain should settle its lend-lease account with the U. S. they had agreed on the broad principles to be followed after the war:

The two would cooperate in creating after the war a liberal international economic system which would reduce tariffs, expand production and encourage free trade.

Abroad

Java's Plight.

Japanese occupation of Bali, left invaders at both flanks of Java, their ultimate goal in the Indies, for already they were at the southern tip of Sumatra, 30 miles from the western end of Java.

During a lull aat midweek the American and Dutch defenders of Java girded themselves. They were protecting a rich island of 40,000,000 people, site of the United Nations' headquarters in the Far East and the strongest naval base, Soerabaja, in the Southwest Pacific.

Fifteen hundred miles to the north the British began evacuating Rangoon, terminus of the Road to Mandalay, as the Japanese pressed close to the road. Among the road's defenders were desperate, daring American volunteer fliers. On Wednesday they and RAF pilots destroyed 30 enemy planes in a bold sweep over enemy lines.

Sharp Eyes on Neutrals.

Neutral Portugal let the Japanese get away with occupying her Timor near Java with only an "energetic protest." The occupation raised anew in allied minds the question of whether Portugal could be depended upon to defend the highly strategic Azores and Cape Verde islands in the Atlantic.

Vichy France, ostensibly neutral was again under suspicion as reports were circulated by the Free French that Japan was asking Vichy for bases on the huge island of Madagascar off southeastern Africa. Madagascar, an anthropological wonderland, has at Diego-Saurez one of the finest natural harbors below the Equator. Vichy sources insisted France would defend the island from all quarters.

Stalin's Promise.

Stalin promised Russians: "The Red banner will fly everywhere it has flown before."

All along the line, Russians surged forward. They pressed in on strategic Smolensk. The Vichy radio, in a curious broadcast, purportedly relayed a German broadcast that Russions had launched their greatest offensive of the war and that the relief of Leningrad was imminent. At Staraya Russa, 140 miles below Leningrad, the Russians scored a crushing victory of encirclement.

Quotes

John W. McCormack, representative from Massachusetts, draws a parallel: "In the present crisis, we also have a president who, like Washington and Lincoln, has faith and courage and who is realistic."

Count Carlo Sforza, former Italian foreign minister, warns: "You Americans . . . have no idea of the type of life you'd be forced to live under the dictatorship of a Nazi beast such as Hitler."

People

Imaginative Athletes.

The Federal Food and Drug Administration was skeptical of reports that people could improve their endurance by eating gelatin. It put some football players to pedalling bicycles.

They pedalled for 13 days without tablets and showed no appreciable improvement. Then some were given gelatin tablets and their endurance increased 200%. But the others were given sugary tablets which they believed contained gelatin, but which didn't. Their endurance also jumped 200%.

Russia's Idea of 'All Out.'

As Russia celebrated the Red Army's 24th birthday Eddie Gilmore, AP newsman in Russia, described how the Soviets have built their army realistically. He wrote:

"You may not find a golf club in Moscow but you'll never see a soldier without a gun. You may yourself have hard time buying a fur coat, but you don't see front line fighters without them.

"The civilian consumer may encounter trouble buying knee-length felt boots, but not the soldier. It may take you some time and money to purchase a fur hat, but the Red army has such hats in abundance. I have yet to see a pair of boots on a soldier that didn't look first class."

MISS RUTH WINKLER WEDS FRANK HAMMER

Ceremony Performed for Couple Friday Evening In Grace Gospel Church By Uncle of Bride, Rev. Charles D. Snyder.

IN A CANDLELIGHT CEREMONY Friday at 7:30 p. m. in the Grace Gospel church Miss Ruth Lucille Winkler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Winkler, 58 Henry avenue, became the bride of Frank Paul Hammer, son of Mrs. Elizabeth Hammer, 263 Auburn avenue. Rev. C. D. Snyder, uncle of the bride, performed the service before an altar attractively decorated with palms, ferns, beauty baskets of gladioli and two seven branch candelabra.

The former Miss Winkler, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a formal gown of white slipper satin fashioned with a fitted bodice, a sweetheart neckline, full sleeves that fit tight at the wrists and a full skirt. Her only jewelry was a strand of pearls, a gift of the bridegroom. The finger tip veil she wore, which was attached to a coronet of seed pearls, had been worn by her sister, Mrs. Robert Portner. She carried a shower bouquet of white roses, gardenias and carnations.

Mrs. Robert Portner and Miss Florence Winkler, sisters of the bride, served as the attendants. They were attired in pale blue taffeta gowns fashioned similar to that of the bride with puffed sleeves and full skirts with bustle backs. Blue bonnets trimmed with yellow were worn on their heads and they carried arm bouquets of jonquils and acacia. Harold Hammer, brother of the bridegroom, served as best man. Ushers were Ralph Winkler, brother of the bride, Michael Hammer, brother of the bridegroom, and Robert Portner, brother-in-law of the bride.

Miss Marjorie Mountain, pianist and friend of the bride, played nuptial music preceding and during the ceremony. Some of her selections were "Liebestraum," "At Dawning," "I Love You Truly" and the traditional wedding marches. Mrs. Winkler appeared at her daughter's wedding in a navy blue frock with white and navy accessories and a corsage of gardenias. Mrs. Hammer wore a navy blue and white ensemble with a shoulder corsage of gardenias.

Following the ceremony a reception was held for 35 guests at home of the bridegroom's mother. Luncheon was served buffet style from a long table attractively decorated with gladioli, and lighted tapers and centered with a three tiered wedding cake topped with a miniature bridal couple. The couple is now on a short wedding trip. For traveling the bride wore a navy blue and pink crepe frock with navy accessories and a corsage of gardenias. Upon their return they will reside at 151½ Vale avenue.

Mrs. Hammer was graduated from Mansfield Senior high school and is employed at the Farm Tools Incorporated. Mr. Hammer was also graduated from Mansfield Senior high school and is employed at the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company.

HOROSCOPE

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, March 1.

SUNDAY'S horoscope is a disconcerting one, with signs of sudden and devastating adventures in which unforseen factors are at work to undermine, baffle and confuse by their unpredictable quality. Strangers, queer circumstances and stubborn obstacles seem to incite to rash, impulsive and ungoverned conduct, which may make bad matters worse, with reactions on the nerves and health as well as possessions. With calm, control and restraint there may be some benefits.

If It Is Your Birthday?

Those whose birthday it is may run into a year calling for much cleverness, sagacity, self-control and poise, in order to cope with stubborn obstacles, or surprising visitations of a devastating and perplexing force. These seem to have strange factors and may best be met my similar tactics, but not with impetuosity or strife. Be calm.

A child born on this day will have a very impetuous reckless erratic disposition, with many reversals or upsets, although its younger years may bring surprising fortune.

For Monday, March 2.

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a fairly favorable state of affairs, especially in connection with public activities or in the interest of large corporation or secret, political or fraternal bodies. Use strategy and discretion and moderate recognition may accrue, despite peculiar underlying problems. Elders or old associations may be of assistance, but resort to finesse rather than force.

If It Is Your Birthday.

Those whose birthday it is may have a moderately interesting and progressive year, especially in matters of public, community or group welfare. But superiors and those in high places are not over-eager to co-operate and must be placated. Elders or old institutions may prove more friendly, but these also need tactful approach. Shun show and extravagance.

A child born on this day may be fairly successful despite certain unconventional ideas and conduct, which may be subtle and sly.

Belated Valentine Exchange Enjoyed

Jolly Eight club members enjoyed a belated valentine exchange when they met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Carl Eastman on the South Main street road. Prizes in card games were awarded to Mrs. Joseph Shibinski, Mrs. Steve Konves, Mrs. C. H. Thomas and Mrs. Nick Blocher.

Mrs. Roy Billotte was a guest. Refreshments were served by the hostess. Mrs. Blocher will entertain the club at her home on West Longview avenue on March 26. At that time, names of mystery sisters will be revealed.

Mrs. Grohol Presents Paper

L'Etude club meeting was held at the home of Mrs. E. W. Gottfried, Springmill road, on Thursday. Nine members were present. Mrs. John Grohol read an interesting paper, "Guerilla Warfare in Russia," by Erskine Caldwell.

CHAPTER XV

Phyllis and Ames arrived at the hospital. Phyllis was wearing a new silver fox jacket.

"I've been so worried about you, dear," Phyllis said at the bedside of her friend.

So worried, Judith thought, that it had taken her two days to come. What had Max said? "People change," and Phyllis had become more selfish, tardier and, she guessed, more extravagant. Ames wore the look of a man who was learning patience.

"I'm going home," Emily said. "To stay."

Ames' expression was one of understanding. Phyllis seemed about to utter an exclamation at the absurdity of the idea when obviously she became aware of Mrs. Travers' presence and restrained herself.

Judith thought, "I was fond of Phyllis. Her absent-mindedness used to amuse me as much as it annoyed me. Now I feel that she's failing both as a wife and as a friend. And so soon . . . Marriage isn't something to use to your own best advantage. It is something to which you give lavishly of yourself."

Later in the apartment Mrs. Travers said, "This young man, Tim, is he the reason why Emily has made up her mind to go home?"

Judith turned from the dressing table and looked, frowning, at Emily's plain, sensible mother.

"Yes, he is. Most girls would stay, you know. It takes courage to break your own heart."

"She isn't good enough, you mean?"

"In ways that are not important. You don't soon get over a love affair, Mrs. Travers, that teaches you the answers to love."

The older woman shook her head. "It makes a mother feel so helpless."

The next evening Judith found on a table in the foyer an envelope addressed to her in Max's large, bold handwriting. It was another brief, endearing note . . . "I could do so well with your dark head beside me here," he wrote. "Your letters warm the chilly weather that is never supposed to come to Florida." But he said nothing of returning.

Two weeks passed, bringing more of those brief, endearing notes, and also bringing Emily to the day when she would go home. She had told Tim she was going to rest and recuperate, wishing to avoid any questions or unpleasantness.

Judith and Tim were outside the station that morning when Emily and her mother arrived in an ambulance. Emily, pale and covered by an unflattering blanket, was brought into the station on a wheel chair by Mrs. Travers, Tim and Judith followed.

"Sure you're okay?" Tim asked. Big, healthy, handsome he leaned over her and looked down at her smiling. "You look swell."

Emily said, and her eyes were lying, "I feel swell and being spoiled with all the super-service and attention. It's wonderful being out again and seeing people."

Tim said, "Take it easy. They tell me—I don't know—you wobble pretty badly when you try to walk."

She wrinkled her nose and grinned. "I won't. Walking looks good, too. You don't think how good it is to get around until you can't."

It takes courage to break your own heart . . . Would she be as gallant, Judith wondered? She bit back tears, seeing them—Emily in the wheel chair and Tim standing over her, not knowing that they were saying good-bye and that Emily was sending him back to the life that had been planned for him and the "right" girl for him . . . "don't think such things," Judith thought. "You'll cry and that's what Emily doesn't want. But you can't help comparing them with Max and you and you knew you wouldn't have Emily's courage if you were saying good-bye to Max. You couldn't bear it. It would be like tearing away a part of you."

Was Emily remembering when she had come? Was she remembering the girl from the middle west who had seen too many movies? "A girl doesn't come to New York to find herself. She comes to lose herself." And now she was going home helpless and ill and deeply in debt for the pretty clothes bought for Tim whom she'd never see again.

Never to see Max again . . . Never to look across a table and see his face and hear that voice or feel the demands, the warmth, the words in even his most casual touch. And Emily was feeling it now, everything that good-bye implied, a separation never ending, a last glimpse of a beloved face, memories washing over her.

People were moving toward the gate. There was so much to say this last minute and no time to say it.

Emily held out her thin hand. "Please write and tell me all the news, Judith."

"I shall. You, too." She bent down and kissed Emily's cold cheek and then she and Mrs. Travers turned away for the good-bye of Emily and Tim."

"Good-bye, Tim. Thanks for everything."

"It was nothing, honey. Hurry up and get well and come back. I'm going to miss you like . . ."

"I'm going to miss you, too. And—and thank your mother for being sweet to me that night."

"I'll do that. Don't forget to write."

"Oh, of course."

"I might buzz out to see you."

"That would be grand . . . Better start pushing, mother. We don't want to miss this train . . . Good-bye."

She was taken down on the elevator. Judith and Tim stood and watched it descend. Mrs. Travers shiny face was a trifle grim. But Emily lifted her hand from the gray blanket and gave a gay little salute and smiled. . . . Smiled at Tim.

But Tim was no longer smiling. "Well," he said and sighed. "I guess that's that, Judith. She looks pretty bad, doesn't she?"

"Her doctor didn't want her to leave so soon." Emily had said it was costing too much and she simply couldn't afford to stay longer.

They walked out of the station together.

"Going home or to the store?" Tim asked. "I'll drop you off."

"I'm going back to work."

He said soberly. "Emily is one swell girl, Judith."

"I know. She hasn't an enemy. Her boss, the editor, hated to see her go as much as we do." She could not guess what Tim was thinking.

He glanced at her and smiled. "Don't look so down. She'll be back. In the meantime, are you planning to live alone?"

"I don't know. I haven't thought about it, really." If she and Max would marry soon . . . "Have you any plans, Tim?"

"Plans?" He frowned. "Nope. The same old stuff, I suppose. I may run down to Palm Beach in a few weeks and join Mother and Dad. Things are slow at the office."

Before the store he said, "Call you up sometime, Judith."

She stood in the sun and watched his car move slowly with the traffic. Finally she lost it—lost it as surely as Emily had lost him.

Birthdays and holidays are not the only dates you remember. Judith was to remember not only a certain day in January, but the days that preceded it, vividly for the rest of her life. There was the apartment in which no Emily stood over the kitchen stove at night to greet her or to chat with her in the morning while breakfast was prepared. The telephone was a silent thing. Judith could not remember when she had been so conscious of silence and loneliness in a city where there is little silence and where one is never supposed to be lonely.

On a certain night in January she rode down on a crowded elevator and listened to a fellow-artist tell her about a bargain in the fur coat she was wearing. Then the dark, crowded street received her and she stopped to buy a newspaper before she walked to the bus.

The faces of men and women hurrying to some shelter for the night had never failed to interest her. Where were they going? To what and to whom? Slim girls in teetering heels and silly hats and older women with tired faces marked by tragedy. Young men with roving eyes and older men with tired eyes fastened on newspapers. All going somewhere to those little worlds they had created for themselves.

Judith felt snug and happy and fortunate with her own lot. There were no untied ends to her life. Her job was established, her family well and Max would soon return. It was like a warm, protecting mantle, her love for him, that seemed to set her apart from the people on the crowded bus.

She walked briskly from the bus to the apartment and asked for her mail. The clerk, a pleasant young man, gave her a letter, smiled and said meaningly, "Another!" She thanked him and smiled back, seeing that it was a letter from Max.

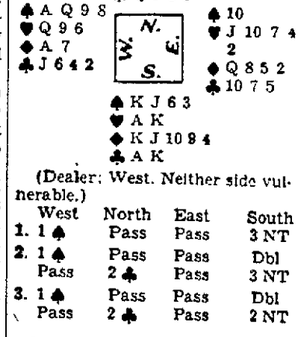
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

BEWARE OF BIG HANDS

IT IS VERY pleasant to pick up a nice bunch of aces and kings. But the more you play bridge, the more wary you will be when you find yourself holding a great powerhouse. So many of those hands go awry because you have to lead away from them, and can't take any tricks in the opposite hand, that fine players hesitate to go the limit with them unless they find from the bidding that their partners have either a few high cards or distributional values through fair length in some fitting suit.



(Dealer: West. Neither side vulnerable.)

	West	North	East	South
1.	1 ♠	Pass	Pass	3 NT
2.	1 ♠	Pass	Pass	Dbl
	Pass	2 ♣	Pass	3 NT
3.	1 ♠	Pass	Pass	Dbl
	Pass	2 ♣	Pass	2 NT

There were still other bids on that deal, in a duplicate, though the three tables reported were typical of most. Where West opened with 1-Club and South doubled, North bid 1-Spade and South 4-Spades. Loss of three spades and a diamond beat that contract. In fact, the only declarer who made his contract was the 2-No Trump man at Table 3. Just about the same play came at all three of the tables reported.

West led his spade 8 to the 10 and J South laid down the club K and A to set up the Q in dummy, which he never was able to use. Next, to get out of West's hand the diamond A which he needed for his first bid, South led the diamond K. West took it and had sense enough to avoid repeating spades. He led the heart 6 to the A. South sent the diamond J to the Q and took the returned heart J with the K.

Then he ran three diamonds, making a total of eight tricks, but when he had to finish with a spade to the 11th trick, discovered that West had held the spade A-Q and the heart Q, which took the last three tricks, making a total of five for the defense.

Tomorrow's Problem.

Aside from the value of aiding your partner to read your holding accurately, what advantage is there in an honor lead such as the jack from a combination headed by ace-jack-ten, over a fourth-best lead from the same combination?

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"YES, of course," I told the operator. "Please connect him at once." And the next moment the gay, insouciant voice of Ronald's roommate and fidus Achates came to my ears.

"Mrs. Graham?"

"Yes, Bob. I am so glad to hear your voice."

"And I to hear yours, Milady. But I can't help thinking you didn't call just to hear my dulcet tones."

He gave an infectious, throaty chuckle at the end of his speech, and I laughed with him.

Of one thing I was sure. He had no inkling of the tragedy with which Ronald was grappling. He knew nothing of Marion's disappearance, or of Carolyn's mysterious connection with the gangsters.

He had not been in love with Carolyn as Ronald had been with Marion, but he had been decidedly attracted by her.

But I had no time for conjecture or speculation. He was waiting for an answer to his query, and I gave it to him quickly.

Madge Gives Reasons.

"You are right Bob," I said. "Ronald has something most important to do, a sudden call from my father, government business, which cannot be explained over the telephone. But my father is here, and will tell you what Ronald wishes you to do for him. Ronald is not here, or he would tell you himself. Are you ready to talk to my father?"

He gave a low chuckle.

"I feel exactly like Alice in Wonderland," he said, "but I'm game for all kinds of plain and fancy sleuthing. Sure, I'm ready to talk to your dad. But I hope he doesn't expect anything much of me. When they passed around brains, you know, they sort of forgot me."

"I imagine you'll get along," I told him dryly, and beckoned my father to the telephone. He began to speak briskly, incisively.

Spencer Explains.

"Here is what I want, Bob," he said. "Ronald will be absent from the university for an indefinite time; we hope for only a few days, but it may be longer.

"What's that?" he interrupted himself, and I guessed that Bob had sent an agitated query over the wire.

"No, no," he isn't ill, or in any scrape at all. He's unraveling a bit of trouble, but it isn't his. Now please listen carefully to what I have to tell you.

"I have arranged with the authorities at the university so his absence will not be questioned. But—this is most important—his father and mother must not know that he is absent from the university."

There was evidently another quick query from Bob.

"Carolyn knows simply that Ronald is away from the university. Please be non-committal if you write or talk to her. She probably will not discuss Ronald with you.

"Now Ronald wishes you to open all letters he receives from anybody. If there is anything in them that requires a quick answer, telephone him here. Otherwise, mail them to him care this hotel.

"If his father or mother telephones him, say that he has gone out on, say, a geology expedition—you will know the excuses—and then get Ronald on the telephone. He will know what to do.

"Once more," my father's voice was almost solemn now, "remember that his father and mother must not know that he is not at college. Can you promise that?"

Tygers Edged In Closing Minutes By Tall Bulldogs

Sport Podge

by REX HESS

It begins to appear that the annual Richland county high school basketball tournament, now in full swing at Mansfield Senior high school gym, with semi-final games this afternoon and finals tonight, will continue to be a perennial Mansfield institution.

When male enrollment at Madison high school exceeded Class B athletic limits last Nov. 1, a bit of fear was expressed in some quarters that the county joust without the Rams wouldn't be able to draw the usual big crowds in the Mansfield gym.

Those fears were erased Thursday night.

There's no getting away from the fact that the absence of Madison high school from the county tourney lists automatically takes away a large chunk of crowd from the tournament stands, even though there were quite a few Madison followers present Thursday night in the role of plain Gus and Mary Q. Phan.

But you'd never have known by looking at that crowd that the tournament had just lost its largest school, and that presumedly the back-bone of the tourney crowd had been amputated.

From crossroads, village, hamlet, town,
The people came from miles around,
To watch their boys disport with zing,
And shoot and run like anything.

Every seat was taken, and then some. Standing room was at the well-known premium. Gym exits were jammed with pop-eyed patrons of the game watching the buckeball thrillers put on display by the county hoopsters.

Any idea that anyone might have had that the tournament would suffer by the loss of Madison, and would have to be moved to the smaller gym at Lucas, went out the window as the fans poured through the gate.

And Willard Weekley, who hasn't had too many happy moments as school superintendent at Butler lately, was beaming all over the place as the successful manager of a successful tournament.

Whizzer White, my No 1 behind-the-scenes operative in county high school athletics, explains the situation thus:

"Crowds will be bigger than ever with Madison out of the tournament. Towns that thought they never had a chance with the Rams in the running, now believe their boys have a chance to go places.

"And they'll come out to watch the going."

This wise man of some rotundity,
Speaks his piece with profundity.

Illini Can Clinch Big 10 Cage Title

CHICAGO —(AP)— Illinois will have an opportunity to cinch an undisputed championship and the four-team tie for second place will be broken in tonight's five-game schedule in the Big Ten basketball race.

* * *

Needing only one victory in three remaining contests to take the title alone, Illinois meets Northwestern at the Chicago stadium. Bracketed in second place, with eight victories and four losses each, are Minnesota, Indiana, Iowa and Purdue. The schedule pits Minnesota against Indiana at Bloomington tonight and Purdue against Iowa at Iowa City.

* * *

Chicago meets Michigan at Ann Arbor. In the fifth game of the evening eighth-place Ohio State entertains Wisconsin, 1941 champions, now in sixth place.

REACH SEMI-FINALS

KENT — (AP) — High school wrestlers swung into semi-finals of their state tournament today with Shadyside high school leading Wadsworth and Cleveland John Hay squads by a single man. Shadyside has seven grapplers in the meet. A feature of yesterday's opening matches was the upset victory of Akron South's Mickey Shoulders, 165, over Bob Kukla, Cleveland West Tech's city champ.

ABC Skeds Arrive Late For Joust

Forwarding of Opening Date Causes Headaches.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — "S-h-h, Gus sent me."

That may sound like a return to prohibition days, but it's only one of 2,000 worried bowlers trying to get a peek at the highly guarded schedules for the world championships which open here Tuesday night under direction of the American Bowling congress.

* * *

Because the schedules were mailed late, most of the nation's bowlers know only that they're coming to Columbus sometime during the 12-day meet. In previous years they got their assignments at least 10 days before the tournament opened.

* * *

Only three of the 250-page programs were available here today, and a bowling reporter got this reply from Charlie Vance, ABC field representative, when he asked to see one of the assignment books:

"What schedule? Who sent you?"

This big schedule of the world's largest sporting event started brewing when the opening date was set 10 days earlier than in previous years.

* * *

Fearful that real complications would develop if they tried to change the final entry date, ABC officials followed the custom of 42 years and set it for Feb. 1.

This gave them 60 days less to look over entries and arrange the schedule, hence the late mailing. The big books should begin arriving over the week-end, with teams schedulel for opening night getting theirs today

E. H. Baumgarten, ABC secretary, said 108 teams would man the 36 alleys in three shifts Tuesday night after Gov John W Bricker opens the event by trying to keep the first ball on the 42-inch alley.

Costing $65,000, the alleys will be in constant use from 9:30 a. m. until 1 a. m. daily. Pins the 5,744 teams will try to knock down cost $98,000.

Ashland Clips Marion Lead

Shelby, Bucyrus Also Take NCO Loop Games.

ASHLAND — Pushing Marion Harding from an undisputed hold on first place in the North Central Ohio basketball league last night, Ashland high school defeated the Presidents, 38-30, and moved into a tie for the top spot.

* * *

Clarence Prentice, Ashland forward, sparked the A's to their win with 19 points which enabled his club to take a 22-11 lead at the half which was unchallenged until the closing minutes of play.

In other NCO games last night Shelby overpowered Galion, 53-38, and Bucyrus thrmmed Mt. Vernon, 39-31.

The victory was Shelby's second in league play. Galion has lost 10 straight loop tilts.

If Mt Vernon had won its game with Bucyrus, it would have been tied with the other two teams for first place.

Olga Luich Again Leads Westie Girls

Once again Olga Luich paced the Westinghouse women's bowling league last night at Colony alleys with a 439 total, but L. McClure turned in the league's high game of 174 on top of a 114 game.

PLAN MEAT SHOOT

Mansfield Gun club will hold a meat shoot Sunday at the club range on Park avenue west road, with a thousand pounds of fresh beef, cured hams and bacon on the prize list.

FREDERICKTOWN WINS

MT. VERNON — By filling the baskets with 22 points in the third period Fredericktown defeated Danville, 41-23, to cop the 1942 Knox county Class B tournament. Both clubs will play at the Westerville district event.

May Help to Replace Feller

VERNON KENNEDY, left, former star of the Washington Senators, may give Cleveland's young manager, Lou Boudreau, right, a few less headaches in searching for a successor to Bobby Feller, now in the navy. The two were snapped at the Indians' camp at Clearwater, Fla.

Crush Kenyon, 77-43 For 2nd Straight Title.

(By Associated Press)

Mt. Union's Purple Raiders still are Ohio's basketball kings.

The Mounts won the state collegiate and Ohio conference cage crowns for the second straight season by crushing Kenyon, 77 to 43, last night to roll up their 17th victory in 18 games and their 13th conference triumph in 14 starts.

It was the sixth conference championship for the Raiders, who also won the title in 1926-29-31-32.

* * *

The Purple Raiders' win on their home court dashed the hopes of Capital for an upset which would give the Lutherans the conference title. Capital won 12 league games and lost one.

* * *

Charles Joachim, all-around forward for the two years, led the Raiders' victory march with 23 points, bagging 22 from the floor and one free throw. Forward Lynch got 11 for Kenyon.

UNIVERSITY DEFEATS MT. GILEAD CAGE CLUB

MT. GILEAD—University high school of Columbus shaded Mt. Gilead last night, 37-33, after trailing in the opening minutes of play.

Rhodebeck of Mt. Gilead, however, took the scoring honors with 13 points scored on six baskets and one free throw.

Stoltz Pastes Bobby Ruffin

Jacobs Considers Match With Lightweight Champ.

By SID FEDER

NEW YORK—(AP)—For several years, when he was just a kid, Allie Stolz studied in Newark Art school, but it is safe to assume that the job of hand painting he did on Bobby Ruffin with his fists last night was a gaudier work of art than anything he ever turned out with a brush.

* * *

The direct result of this display of fistic daubing was that Promoter Mike Jacobs indicated today he was considering pairing Allie Stolz with Lightweight Champion Sammy Angott.

Thus, the fight that Allie Stolz was going to call off proved to be the stepping stone on which the stylish Newark socker probably will land a shot at the crown in May.

He loyally refused, at the weigh-in yesterday, to go through with the tussle after the profound New York State athletic commission suspended his long-time second, Willie Ketchum. It was only after a dozen or so interested parties including Ketchum, pleaded with the Jersey jolter that he agreed to fight without his trainer in his corner.

Of course, the plans for a Stolz-Angott affair are bound to bring up quite an argument for Bob Montgomery, the Philadelphia flailer, but Jacobs and Angott's set figures that Sammy can take care of Philadelphia Bob in the approved style in an over-weight party in the Garden next Friday.

* * *

There are those who think Allie ought to qualify by taking on Montgomery before saying "howdy" to Sammy, but after the 23-year-old Newarker all but punched the ears off the 5 to 9 favorite last night, Promoter Mike was all for pairing him with Angott as soon as possible. And the fact that last night's little get-together drew a gate of $35,644.95 isn't going to hinder the boys in making up their minds.

For Use of Latin American Athletes

ORLANDO, Fla—(AP)—President Clark Griffeth of the Washington Senators, a pioneer in the field, said today he believed increasing recognition of Latin-American athletes in this country would greatly aid the good neighbor policy.

With seven Spanish-speaking caballeros in his organization already, Griffith said that as long as Latin-American countries continue to produce good baseball prospects, he will be in the market for them.

Stage Comeback After 18-8 First Quarter

Romano Proves Game Star On Fighting Play; Windy Has 260

By REX HESS, News-Journal Sports Editor.

OUTSCORED 18-8 in the first quarter, Mansfield's valiant Tygers staged a courageous comeback last night to battle Canton McKinley's towering Bulldogs right down to the wire before losing a 38-47 decision last night at Senior high gym in the final game of the regular cage schedule.

The defeat left the Tygers with a season's record of 14 victories against six defeats, four of which came in the first five games of the campaign.

Once again the Mansfield gym was crowded to capacity with between 1,300 and 1,500 fans taking every inch of seating and standing room.

And Bob Winbigler, Mansfield high's new all-time season's scoring champion, passed the quarter-century mark as he boosted his winter's total to 260 points.

But high scoring honors for the game went to Joe Romano, who played his best brand of ball of the season, a statement that stands up with or without the 15 points he chalked up. Joe was battling in there all the way and once more proved a keen competitor.

The big crowd was convinced, watching Canton McKinley, that it was looking at one of the best high school teams in the state, although it may not go far in tournament play since all of its three defeats have been at the hands of district clubs, Massillon, Canton Timken and Akron St. Vincent.

The Bulldogs didn't miss many shots in that hot 18-8 first quarter, and with a decided advantage in height they controlled the ball under both baskets and on nearly every tip.

In spite of that handicap the Tygers were able to battle their way back into the ball game, coming up to within two points of the winners at the third quarter mark, and staying only one and two points behind through most of the final heat.

Cook canned a one-hander from the corner and Wernet got a free point. Winbigler made a free shot. Garver hooped a pair of free tosses. Romano got a free point. Haverstock sank a long shot from the side, and then tallied again on a fast break. Winbigler caged one from center court.

Coleman scored under the hoop and it was 11-4 for McKinley. Romano missed a free chance. Hahn sank a

PSYCHOLOGY HAS VITAL ROLE IN FLIER TRAINING

Doctor Uses Pills and Words In Experiments To Aid Young Aviators.

By DEVON FRANCIS

LAKELAND, Fla.(Wide World) —The young man who stood before the flight surgeon of one of Florida's primary flight schools was unsmiling and obviously depressed.

"I'm through," he said. "I want to quit. I don't want to learn to fly."

The flight surgeon was puzzled. The student had been one of the standouts in his class, one of hundreds who had come from England for Royal Air Force flight training on American soil. But he had hit a slump in recent weeks.

"Why?" asked the doctor.

The student hesitated. Then the dam burst and with it came out all his worries for two months and a half.

There was a girl, he said. They had become engaged in England, before his departure for the United States. He hadn't heard from her for eight or nine weeks. Finally she wrote. Meanwhile he became convinced that she no longer cared for him. He was miserable.

The medical officer, Maj. Richard C. Cumming of the Lakeland School of Aeronautics, has seized on the war emergency to make a psychological and physiological study of student fliers.

He believes the war is affording an unparalleled opportunity to medical science to determine the effects of flight on the body and — just as important — to probe into flier's minds. Fixations of one type or another can make or unmake a flier, just as the peculiarities of diet can modify the ailment known as air-sickness.

"In the first place," he told the RAF student, "you are assuming the girl no longer cares for you. Until she proves that, you have no right to jump to conclusions.

"In the second, you are sacrificing the biggest opportunity you ever will have in your lifetime to learn to fly.

"Finally, you are here as a soldier-citizen, and your country is depending on you to deliver."

Four days later the student was back. He smiled broadly at Major Cumming. Apparently he had wrestled with and whipped his own problem.

"It's all right," he confided. "I'll make a go of it, regardless."

The doctor gave up a private practice in Ocala, Fla., when called by the army and instituted his studies of human nature when Albert I. Lodwick, who managed Howard Hughes' record-breaking flight around the world in 1938, came to Florida in September, 1940, to establish a chain of primary flight training schools under supervision of the East air corps naming center.

He indulges in a little experimenting with the student fliers for the morale effect.

"I'd like to have a fund," he told Lodwick one day, "to buy vitamin pills and some other small items, both for the physical well-being and for the morale of the students."

The major-doctor got the fund and the pills. He prescribes the pills because they are good for students under the strain of flying instruction and, equally important, because he has convinced them that the pills are good for practically anything that ails them.

"They imagine they feel better when they take a pill," he explains cheerfully.

DENTAL CLINIC WILL SET UP QUARTERS IN CITY BUILDING

Establishment of a dental office in the city health department at the municipal building was assured the Mansfield Dental Clinic today after conferences by organization representatives with Dr. W. B. Wild, city-county health commissioner, and Mayor William J. Locke.

The reception room in the health department will be partitioned to provide space for the clinic, according to Mrs. Warren Fort, president of the organization, and present plans indicate that the cost of making this alteration will be small.

Equipment for the office is the next thing to be considered by the organization and Dr. W. H. Wolford of the medical advisory committee will be consulted regarding that phase of the project, Mrs. Fort said. Mrs. Anna Knote, purchasing chairman, was the other clinic representative present at the conference yesterday.

Plans to put the office into operation in the next six weeks are under way and the new clinic is expected to facilitate the work of furnishing dental treatment to needy school children that was heretofore performed in private offices.

Thirty-five children are now receiving treatment and the work for 15 others was completed this month.

OUTLINE DRIVE

Bond Sale Organization to Stage Speaking Program.

Plans for pushing the defense saving bond drive with speeches before numerous clubs and organizations were discussed last night at a meeting of the executive committee, speakers committee, and advertising and publicity committees of the county defense bond sale organization.

R. G. Fensch presented a motion picture showing Pearl Harbor scenes and other pictures. Paul M. Eliot, county bond sale chairman, said it is hoped to show the film at numerous club meetings.

Eliot said one method planned to expand the bond sales is to request each club and organization to appoint a defense chairman, with whom his group can work to arrange a special program on defense savings bonds.

This activity will be handled particularly. Eliot said, by the women's committee headed by Mrs. Helen K. Ott, and the committee on civic, fraternal, and professional organizations and public affairs. This group is headed by Henry G. Brunner.

SUNKIST

—whenever we see or hear the word "Sunkist" our reaction is one and the same—from Grandmother Bell to Little Sally—we all visualize a delicious, juicy, nourishing fruit which possess that delightfully sweet and tangy flavor . . .

an Orange!

Every day you buy dozens of articles. No doubt you have often wondered what part of the price you pay for these things was spent for advertising. Well—let's take a few popular examples. The advertising on Sunkist oranges is about four-tenths of a cent per dozen—on a package of Camel cigarettes, one-half cent—on a two dollar Ingersoll watch, 5 cents—on a ten dollar pair of Florsheim shoes, 25 cents—on an $800 automobile, $8.00—on a bottle of Coca Cola, one-tenth of a cent. This will give you some idea.

ACTUALLY THE ADVERTISING COSTS YOU NOTHING . . . IT SAVES YOU MONEY. The reason is that advertising is largely responsible for mass demand, and, consequently, mass production and much lower cost per item. This REDUCES the prices of the things you buy—gives you better products.

If there was any cheaper or better way of getting the same volume than advertising, you may be sure that business concerns would quickly adopt it!

"Efficient advertising is an economic asset, not a liability. Instead of increasing prices, it really has lowered them. This comes about through the economics of mass production—an American business development that would have been impossible without advertising. . . . Advertising is to trade what ambition, initiative and enterprise are to a human being. It is what speeds up business. Every live and growing concern advertises in some way or another. To stop advertising would be to stop growing."

I—VITAL STATISTICS

2—Card of Thanks

I WISH sincerely to thank my many friends for their kind expressions of sympathy and for the beautiful floral offerings received during the sad loss of my dearly beloved husband. I also wish to thank Rev. C. A. Portz for his consoling words and the Jones Memorial for their efficient services.
MRS. HELEN STOUT. (L-K)

WITH REGARD TO A CARD OF THANKS

Very often a Card of Thanks in The News-Journal meets a need which can hardly be solved in any other way. Not only is it a gracious expression of gratitude to those who have sent floral tributes, but also courteously acknowledges the service and kindness of the many to whom a personal note of thanks cannot well be mailed, or whose names or addresses are not known.

A "Card of Thanks" can now be arranged by telephone: Dial 4251-6, ask for Miss Lane or Miss Stone, either will be glad to render whatever service and advice you need.

WE'VE GOT A LITTLE HOT WATER TO WADE AROUND IN, BUT THE DANGER IS ALL GONE!
THE STEAM'S CLEARING UP, TOO!

WESTINGHOUSE LISTED AMONG HIGHER STOCKS

Many Leaders Manage to Add Fractions to Friday's Recovery Move.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—There was scant bullish news for the stock market today but many leaders managed to add fractions to Friday's recovery.

The few customers who appeared in Wall Street seemed disposed to keep commitments light pending developments over the week-end, specially the outcome of the important naval battle between United Nations and Japanese forces in the Java sea. Earnings summaries aided a number of share favorites but were ignored by others.

Among stocks mild support was accorded N. Y. Central, Standard Oil (NJ), Texas Co., U. S. Steel, Chrysler, Western Union, Goodrich, Sears Roebuck, Kennecott, Westinghouse, Du Pont and United Aircraft.

Attracting interest in boardrooms were forecasts that earlier armament production goals for 1942 would be revised upw rd by substantial margins. It had been estimated officially, for example, that expenditures this year would be around $40,000,000,000. Administration statisticians, it was said, have boosted the figure to $50,000,000,000.

JAPS BEATEN IN FURIOUS 2-DAY FIGHT AT SEA

Fleet Driven Out of Java Sea, Expected to Launch New Assault.

N. E. I. communique said that up to 1 p. m. (Batavia time) today there had been no Japanese landings on Java.

This portion of the communique also told of an enemy attack on an unspecified outlying N. E. I. possession but said the assault was repulsed. It stated:

"One of our possessions was attacked by greatly superior numbers of enemy forces. The attack was repulsed by machine gun fire and many were killed.

"Our troops also have inflicted serious losses on the enemy in Timor island."

The announcement was the first official indication of the outcome of the Java sea battle, which began last night and continued into this morning.

During the battle, American planes and warships hammered furiously at the Japanese naval squadron, along with other United Nations forces.

As the opposing forces remained locked in a major engagement that began last night, a terse Dutch communique said the "action is developing."

It was presumed that United States warships and dive-bombers were being supported in the battle by high-altitude "flying fortress" bombers.

(A Japanese communique broadcast by the official Tokyo radio said a Japanese fleet "intercepted a combined Allied fleet off the Netherlands East Indies last night and sank one cruiser and three destroyers." This Jap announcement added that the "enemy is being pursued."

(There was absolutely no confirmation of the Japanese claim that four warships have been sunk in battle. In the past few days the Japanese have been putting out wild victory claims—obviously in the hope of obtaining information.)

The new sea battle, thundering north of the island bastion of Java, on which the strategic Soerabaja naval base is situated, may play an important, possibly decisive, role in the fierce struggle for possession of the Netherlands East Indies.

(The London Daily Express reported from Bandung, Java, that a tremendous battle between the United Nations fleet and a strong Jap squadron raged throughout the night.

(This account said United States and Dutch cruisers blazed at "heavier enemy units" and that "Allied submarines also were in action, as were American divebombers and high level bombers."

(The Express said the action apparently was begun by the Japanese "in an effort to wipe out the United Nations' sea power preparatory to a full scale invasion of Java."

Asserts Japs Lose Several Warships

LONDON — (UP) — The London Star reported from Batavia without confirmation today that Japan lost several warships and about five transports in sea fighting with American and Dutch forces off Java.

The Star correspondent, John Elmore, reported that an "enormous" Japanese convoy protected by a score of warships had attempted to start the invasion of Java but was driven off "in disorder" to the north in the direction of Borneo.

The enemy fleet started out from Borneo, he added.

Fighting Eases On Batan Peninsula

WASHINGTON —(UP)— Fighting has eased off on Batan peninsula with Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces stabilizing their advanced lines a few miles beyond the front which existed prior to their recent exploratory offensive, the war department reported today.

Operations of the past 24 hours were limited to "relatively minor patrol skirmishes," the department said in a communique based on advices received up to 9:30 a. m. (EWT.)

The new front of the American and Filipino defenders apparently is from four to five miles in advance of the front which they held early this week when they began their "baby" offensive to feel out the enemy positions.

Japs Admit U. S. Attack On Wake

Japan reluctantly revealed today that the United States navy had attacked, Japanese forces on Wake island where a small band of heroic marines held out for weeks against almost continuous Japanese aerial and sea assaults.

The attack occurred last Tuesday, the Japanese communique said. It revealed that it had been carried out with considerable force.

For days, Japanese propagandists had hinted that there had been a clash between United States and Japanese armed forces, presenting a number of contradictory claims. Only today was it acknowledged that American forces had swooped down on the scene of the valiant and hopeless battle of outnumbered American fighting men.

The Japanese communique admitted only that a Japanese patrol boat had been sunk, that military facilities on the island had been "slightly" damaged, that there had been a "few" casualties.

Reds Rout Two Nazi Divisions In South

MOSCOW —(INS)— Routing of two German divisions on the southern front in a battle in which 7,500 Nazis were killed was announced by the Russian high command today.

Soviet troops were reported lashing savagely at the Germans along the entire battle front and latest reports said that more than 12,000 Germans had been slain, including the 7,500 in the south. The 16th German army corps was still reported trapped in the Staraya Russa district.

A new effort by the 16th to break out of the Soviet encircling ring was declared to have failed.

"Our troops," said this official broadcast, "are inflicting blow after blow upon the encircled enemy troops.

"German attempts to supply their encircled troops failed. A great part of the supplies dropped to the Germans have fallen into our hands."

TROOPS RULE IN SCORCHED CITY

British Troops Take Over Rangoon; Japs Feared to Have Crossed Sittang.

river were believed to be about 2,000, it was stated.

Previously, the British had been reported holding their Sittang river positions in the face of an anticipated Japanese assault.

Meanwhile, reports from New Delhi, India, revealed the Japanese have brought the war to Indian territory with raids on Tuesday and Wednesday on the Andaman Islands in the Bay of Bengal.

The Japanese aircraft attacked Port Blair, 375 miles southwest of Rangoon, which occupies an important strategic position in the sea lanes of the Bay of Bengal. The attacks aroused keen speculation as to whether the Japs will attempt occupation of the Andaman Islands.

A British communique issued in Rangoon said that in Wednesday's mass Japanese air raid on Rangoon at least 30 Japanese planes were destroyed. The British communique added:

"Our losses were four fighters. On the same day our aircraft raided Moulmein and sank two cattle boats full of Japanese troops.

American Fliers Bag 20 Jap Planes

The communique said a single American flier missing since Wednesday is believed to have made a forced landing 20 miles from Rangoon.

of the pressure of German counter attacks."

An air ministry communique, reporting heavy attacks by British fighter planes on air fields in occupied territory during the night, indicated that the Royal Air Force had covered the invasion by keeping German planes grounded over a wide area.

At the same time giant bombing planes attacked the Kiel and Wilhelmshaven naval bases, where the battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau are undergoing repairs, and bombed other objectives in northwest Germany.

It was the second use in the war by Great Britain of parachute troops. A year ago, a handful of men were dropped by plane over southern Italy to destroy communications in a key area.

But above all it was the first full-scale raid on the coast from which military experts hold, Britain must sometime strike directly at Germany.

A brief joint communique of the royal navy, army and Royal Air Force told the story which thrilled Britons as they had not been thrilled in many months and was flashed through the world as the first foretaste to Germany of what, it was hoped, would come some day in full force.

to the starboard side and dived. Just before I hit the water there was a second torpedo explosion—I swam toward the open sea, racing as hard as I could from the spreading fire.

"I was so exhausted I couldn't tell whether I had my legs. I saw a boat, yelled and waved. Somehow they caught sight of me. I damned the Nazis as they pulled me out."

A dramatic story of six days and five nights in an open boat after his cargo ship had been torpedoed in the North Atlantic early this month was related by a British sea captain, recuperating in a Long Island hospital.

Wilford George Evans, the ship's master, told how his vessel was rocked by a torpedo that "hit on the port side amidships."

"After abandoning ship, he related, the enemy submarine surfaced. "Men came out of the conning tower. They manned a couple of guns and started to shoot at my ship. They must have fired 70 rounds in half an hour. She stood up like a battleship until they pounded her to death."

Only 15 members of his crew of 71 survived.

On the heels of the tanker torpedoings came a report from the sixth naval district in Charleston, S. C., of another sinking not due to enemy action.

The 5,030-ton freighter Cassimir went down Thursday morning after colliding with an unidentified vessel. A rescue ship brought 31 crew members to Charleston along with five bodies. Two members of the crew are missing.

WANT TO WEAR SLACKS TO WORK

Girls In Clerk's Office Assert They're Warmer.

CLEVELAND — (AP) — Feminine employes of the city clerk's office have asked permission of city council to wear slacks in the office because:

The impending wool shortage has made dresses more expensive;

Girls would not have to wear silk stockings;

They could wear inexpensive, low-heel shoes;

In winter the slacks would be warmer than conventional dresses.

TILLIE THE TOILER

OH, DAVE, I'M TERRIBLY SORRY I CAN'T ACCEPT YOUR PROPOSAL TO MARRY RIGHT OFF... I'VE GOT TO THINK IT OVER
BUT, TILLIE, I MAY BE SENT OVER SEAS AT ANY TIME AND LEAVING YOU HERE WITH THAT BASCOM FELLOW ISN'T GOING TO HELP THE MORALE OF THIS PART OF UNCLE SAM'S ARMY ANY
DAVE, THAT'S FOOLISH
HE WILL BE WITH YOU CONSTANTLY, WHILE I AM AWAY
I'LL PROVE TO YOU NOW THAT BASCOM MEANS NOTHING TO ME
2-13
HOW?
YOU WAIT AND SEE
OH, BUBBLES, DAVE IS TERRIBLY JEALOUS OF BASCOM
WELL, WHY SHOULDN'T HE BE? YOU'RE WITH BASCOM A LOT
I KNOW, BUT I'VE GOT A PLAN TO PROVE TO DAVE THAT BASCOM MEANS NOTHING TO ME-- AND YOU'VE GOT TO HELP
2-24
OKAY, WHAT'S COOKING?
I'M GOING TO TURN BASCOM OVER TO YOU
YOU'RE GIVING HIM TO ME?
WELL-L-L, ONLY TEMPORARILY
MUMSY, I'VE JUST GOT TO PROVE TO DAVE THAT BASCOM MEANS NOTHING TO ME. I'VE SENT FOR BASCOM AND I AM TURNING HIM OVER TO BUBBLES
WHY, TILLIE, I THOUGHT YOU CARED FOR HIM
BASCOM, I WANT YOU TO TAKE BUBBLES TO A DANCE THIS EVENING
MISS JONES, AS A GOOD SERVANT, I AM PLEASED TO OBEY YOUR ORDER
2-25
H-M-M-M- HE SEEMED A BIT TOO PLEASED ABOUT IT TO PLEASE ME
BASCOM, I SHALL EXPECT YOU BACK HERE BY TEN O'CLOCK
COLUMBUS
H G SIMPSON
STATE MUSEUM
WE SHOULD REHEARSE OUR PARTS IN THE PLAY, MISS JONES
YES, BASCOM, BUT OUR REHEARSING THOSE LOVE SCENES HAS MADE DAVE PERRY HORRIBLY JEALOUS
INDEED?
SO I'VE ASKED BUBBLES TO TAKE MY PART
2-26
YOU ARE DOING SPLENDIDLY, BUBBLES
NOW, MISS BUBBLES, WE COME TO THE PLACE IN THE SCRIPT WHERE I KISS YOU ARDENTLY
I WILL TAKE OVER AT THIS POINT, BUBBLES
WHAT'S THE IDEA OF TURNING BASCOM OVER TO BUBBLES?
DAVE PERRY IS JEALOUS OF HIM AND I'M PROVING TO DAVE THAT BASCOM MEANS NOTHING TO ME
OH, -YEAH?
WHAT DO YOU MEAN BY THAT?
2-27
YOU SUBSTITUTED YOURSELF FOR BUBBLES IN THE CAST WHEN THE SCRIPT CALLED FOR A KISSING SCENE, WHILE SHE AND BASCOM WERE REHEARSING FOR THE PLAY
DON'T BE SILLY, MAC
BASCOM IS MY SERVANT, I WOULDN'T WANT HIM KISSING MY BEST FRIEND
HAW! HAW! THAT'S A LAUGH
DO YOU THINK THAT BY TURNING BASCOM OVER TO BUBBLES AND GIVING HER YOUR ROLE IN THE PLAY YOU ARE FOOLING ANYBODY ABOUT YOUR FEELINGS FOR HIM?
IT'S DAVE PERRY'S FEELINGS THAT I AM CONCERNED ABOUT, HE'S JEALOUS OF BASCOM
I'LL CONFESS, BUBBLES, I DID WANT TO FIND OUT BASCOM'S FEELINGS FOR ME
I KNOW THE ANSWER
2-28
WHEN WE REHEARSED THE PLAY TOGETHER THE SCRIPT CALLED FOR TWO KISSING SCENES, ONE AN ARDENT KISS AND THE OTHER A COLD, MATTER-OF-FACT KISS
WHEN BASCOM KISSED ME THEY WERE BOTH THE COLD, MATTER-OF-FACT KIND

LITTLE ANNIE ROONEY

GLORYOSKY, ZERO, BUT EVERYTHING'S GRAND! YOU KNOW, IT ALWAYS MADE ME FEEL KINDA BAD INSIDE OF ME WHENEVER I'D THINK I WAS AN ORPHAN—
'CAUSE I THOUGHT THERE WAS SOMETHIN' THE MATTER WITH ALL ORPHANS AN' THAT ORPHANS WEREN'T LIKE OTHER FOLKS —BUT I DON'T THINK THAT WAY ANY MORE—
YESTERDAY WAS GEORGE WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY AN' MR. OLIVER TOLD US HE WAS ONLY ONE OF LOTS AN' LOTSA ORPHANS WHO BECAME FAMOUS AN' EVERYONE WHO KNEW THEM SAID, "MY GOODNESS, BUT THEY'RE GRAND"?
MR. OLIVER SAID NEVER BE 'SHAMED OR DOWNHEARTED, 'CAUSE WE WERE ORPHANS, 'CAUSE ALL THE HISTORY BOOKS PROVE THAT "ORPHANS ARE AMONG MOTHER NATURE'S FAVORITE CHILDREN"
I WANT TO THANK ALL YOU UNSELFISH VOLUNTEERS WHO HAVE OFFERED TO GIVE ONE-HALF OF YOUR PLAY HOURS EACH DAY TO LABOR ON TINY VICTORY FARMS AND RAISE FRESH VEGETABLES FOR OUR COUNTRY—
R.R4
YOUR FIRST DUTY WILL BE TO GATHER HERE IN THE HOTHOUSE AND LEARN THE ART OF GROWING THINGS—YOU WILL RECEIVE PRACTICAL LESSONS FROM PRACTICAL FARMERS, BUT EACH ONE OF YOU WILL DO ALL THE WORK ON YOUR OWN LITTLE FARM—FROM PLANTING THE SEEDS TO REAPING THE HARVEST—
D. McC.
ONE TINY LITTLE FARM MAY NOT SEEM IMPORTANT, BUT I AM SURE COUNTLESS PATRIOTIC BOYS AND GIRLS WILL BE DOING THE SAME THING ALL OVER THE LAND—AND THEIR COMBINED EFFORTS WILL BE OF INESTIMABLE VALUE IN BRINGING LIBERTY TO THE WORLD
NOW WHAT ARE YOU LAFFIN' AT?
HA-HA-HA-HA-HA—I CAN'T HELP LAUGHING, 'CAUSE EVERY TIME I PEEL AN ONION IT MAKES ME CRY—
AND WHEN I THINK HOW FUNNY I LOOK WHEN I'M CRYING, I SIMPLY DIE LAUGHING, 'CAUSE IT MAKES ME THINK OF A FUNNY RIDDLE—
WHAT FUNNY RIDDLE?
HOW CAN YOU MAKE ICE WATER WITHOUT USING ANY ICE?
I GIVE UP—WHAT'S THE ANSWER?
YOU PEEL AN ONION—THAT MAKES YOUR EYES WATER—
HA, HA, HA, HA, HA
DARRELL McCLURE
GEE, ZERO—I HAD THE SWELLEST DREAM 'BOUT LITTLE VICTORY FARMS LIKE ALL THE KIDS ARE GONNA WORK ON JUST AS SOON AS SPRING COMES—I KIN HARDLY WAIT!
I WAS DREAMIN' I WAS TRAVELIN' ALL OVER THE COUNTRY AN' EVERY PLACE I WENT LITTLE KIDS WERE WORKIN' ON TINY LITTLE VICTORY FARMS—AN' ALL THE LITTLE FARMS LOOKED PRETTIER THAN FLOWER GARDENS
THERE WERE MILLIONS AN' MILLIONS OF 'EM—ALL COVERED WITH SWELL BEETS, AN' BEANS, AN' CARROTS AN' ONIONS—ALL KINDS OF STUFF—AN' ALL THE LITTLE KIDS WERE JUMPIN' UP AN' DOWN, WAVIN' SPADES AN' RAKES AN' HOLLERIN', "HURRAY, HURRAY"!
DARRELL McCLURE
AN' I WAS HOLLERIN', "HURRAY," TOO! 'COURSE, I KNOW IT WAS ONLY A DREAM, BUT WOULDN'T IT BE GRAND, IF IT CAME TRUE!
WOOLF!
HA, HA—DID YOU EVER SEE ANYTHING AS FUNNY IN ALL YOUR LIFE AS BIRDS EATING THEIR BREAKFAST? 'SPECIALLY SPARROWS—
I DON'T THINK THEY'RE SO FUNNY—I THINK THEY'RE AWFUL CUTE
HA, HA—MAYBE THEY ARE CUTE, BUT THEY ALWAYS REMIND ME OF FLYING PIGS—AN' A PIG WITH FEATHERS COULDN'T HELP LOOKING FUNNY
BUT SPARROWS AREN'T PIGS, HANNA—THEY'RE BIRDS AN' MAYBE THEY'LL FEEL BAD IF THEY SEE YOU LAFFIN' AT THEM
HA, HA—SPARROWS NEVER FEEL ANYTHING, EXCEPT HUNGRY
Copr. 1942 King Features Syndicate, Inc. World rights reserved.
BUT SPARROWS ARE COMICAL—THEY GET UP AT DAYLIGHT AND START EATING THEIR BREAKFAST—AN' ALL DAY THEY'RE SO BUSY EATING THEIR BREAKFAST THAT THEY HAVEN'T GOT TIME TO STOP TO EAT THEIR DINNER OR SUPPER! HA, HA—DON'T YOU SEE HOW FUNNY THEY ARE?
DARRELL McCLURE
COULD I HELP YOU WITH THE IRONING, MRS. WHITE? ALL I DO IS BRING YOU THE LAUNDRY AN' YOU DO ALL THE WORK—I'D LIKE TO HELP IF—
NO, HONEY—THANK YOU FOR WANTING TO HELP, BUT YOU'RE TOO YOUNG—
YOU ALWAYS DO YOUR SHARE—NO WONDER MR. OLIVER IS ALWAYS SAYING, "ORPHANS ARE AMONG MOTHER NATURE'S FAVORITE CHILDREN"—ONE OF THE REASONS IS—THE FIRST THING AN ORPHAN LEARNS IS THE LOVE OF CHARITY
MAYBE IT'S BECAUSE MOST ORPHANS ARE POOR AND CHARITY IS THE ONLY LUXURY THEY CAN AFFORD—I NEVER HAD MUCH MONEY, BUT I WAS NEVER TOO POOR TO ENJOY DOING AN ACT OF CHARITY—
I MAY HAVE BEEN SELFISH, BUT I HONESTLY BELIEVE I GOT MORE REAL PLEASURE OUT OF HELPING FOLKS WHO NEEDED HELP—FEEDING FOLKS THAT WERE HUNGRY—THAN SOME FOLKS GET OUT OF ALL THEIR MONEY
